BOUND BY C. MURTON

John Carter Brown.

53. Int. T. p. 138.

Other copy ends p. 96.

Moſes and Aaron:

Or, The Rights of CHURCH and STATE;

Containing two

DISPUTATIONS.

The former concerning the Church, in which are examined the principles of Separation, and their inconſiſtency with truth and peace demonſtrated: and the Government of the Church vindicated into the hands of her proper Rulers.

The latter aſſerts the ſacredneſſe of the perſons and authority of Kings againſt Sacrilegious uſurpation and King-killing.

By that judicious and faithful Miniſter of Chriſt, Mr. JAMES NOYES, ſometimes of Newbury in NEW ENGLAND.

Publiſhed by Benj. Woodbridge, Rector of Newbury in the County of BERKS.

Numb.16.3. And they gathered themſelves together againſt Moſes and againſt Aaron, and ſaid unto them, Ye take too much upon you, ſeeing all the Congregation are holy every one of them, and the Lord is among them: Wherefore then lift ye up your ſelves above the Congregation of the Lord?

Jude ver.11. Periſhed in the Gain-ſaying of Coreh.

LONDON,

Printed by T. R. for Edmund Paxton, in Pauls-chain, over againſt the Caſtle Tavern, near Doctors Commons 1661.

JOHN CARTER BROWN.

RPJCB

To the most

HIGH and MIGHTY PRINCE CHARLES the second, by the Grace of God KING of great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c.

Most dread Soveraign,

WE have seen and heard of strange things in our dayes: the sea dried up, Jordan turned backward, the day neither day nor night and at evening light, desperate sorrow and trouble in the evening, but before the morning gone away. Was it not thus in Germany, when all things there being deplorable and without hope of recovery, a King

King from the North was raiſed up at the prayers and tears of the people of God, who ſuddenly reſtored all beyond expectation? and was it not thus again in England, and the adjoyned Countries, when the Sectarian Army under thoſe grand Uſurpers of our time, had deprived us of King, Parliaments, Liberties, and orderly Government, and had almoſt utterly overthrown the Church and State, Truth and Religion, and were become as a wall of iron againſt all oppoſite attempts, and after the defeat of Sir George Booth there ſeemed to be no more hope remaining? For then when the ſtate of things was deſperate and hopeleſſe, did Chriſt raiſe up Generall Monck from the North after the ſimilitude of Conſtantine, Ziſca and the King of Sweden, by whom the face of things was ſtrangly changed on a ſudden, and a lively hope of reſtauration with advantage unexpectedly reduced. This was done when all help failed, when the oppreſſor ſeemed irreſiſtible; and it was done by a little ſtrength, without blood, without a ſtroke: that it might appear, that it was the finger of the Almighty that had done all this, as riſing up againſt the proud and inſolent lent oppreſſors. Now therefore, whereas we have been in a ſuffering State theſe many years,& God hath now raiſed up your Majeſty to the Throne of Government by a ſtrange and unexpected hand, how can we but expect ſome great birth (for the Church is like a travailing woman,and after every travaile it ſhall bring forth) and not onely the reſtauration of the Church defaced, but alſo the riſing of Chriſts Kingdom to a greater height and enlargement then in former times? The report of proclaiming your Majeſty and your moſt joyful return into England hath wrought in our hearts incredible joy and gladneſſe. And I am like the ſervant of Elias looking out,and looking ſeven times, till I ſee the little cloud ariſing that ſhal increaſe more and more,till all the heavens be covered with clouds,& a great rain of righteouſneſs come down upon the earth to refreſh the hearts of men parched w^th^ drought. Let the heavens rejoyce, and the earth be glad, let mountains burſt forth into praiſes, and all the trees of the field clap their hands: becauſe God hath viſited his people, and hath comforted his afflicted. And let that noble General be bleſſed, and a full reward be given him of the

God

God of Iſrael who hath been honoured to be be ſo great an inſtrument in ſo great a ſervice, and let his name be unto all poſterity renowned. Ariſe O Jeruſalem and ſhine, ſhake off the duſt of thy dejection, put on thy royal garments. Thou mayeſt again go forth with ſongs, together with thy King and with thy Nobles, and with the comely order of thy Governours, and with the refined order of thy Prieſts and Elders, Thou mayeſt again go forth in the dance, and with the Tabret of thy ſpiritual and temporal delight. Thou mayeſt yet again ceaſe to be a reproach to the Nations, the taile of the people; for thy Maker is thine husband, he hath not caſt thee off, he hath had compaſſion one thy affliction, he hath reſtored thy King again, he will cloath thee yet with ſcarlet, and hang jewels of gold upon thine apparel; ſo mayeſt thou be beautified with grace, and truth, and glory external alſo.

And now moſt *R*oyal King, fill the ſails of our hopes with the blaſts of your Noble atchievements; and be like the Sun, that cometh forth as a bridegroom out of his chamber, and rejoyceth as a mighty man to run his race. Let the glory of God and the welfare of his Church be the end you look at. So ſhall Chriſt the Sun of righteouſneſs run along in your Royal Government, and make you a greater King at laſt then you were at firſt. Let Popery and all hereſie fall before you; Let not needleſſe and offenſive Ceremonies be rigorouſly impoſed; Let men of courage and zeal be ſet up under you in all place that ſhall ſuppreſs profaneneſs; Let godly Miniſters be encouraged, and let no idle, unlearned, or heretical Miniſter be found in your Land; Let learning be promoted, and men excellent in gifts be ſet apart for writing, according to their ſeveral and diſtinct qualifications. I cannot but believe that you are ready of your ſelf to do all theſe things, and more alſo then I have ſaid: yet give me leave, I pray your Majeſty to adde a little breath unto your ſayls.

the

Now as touching this work that followeth I have preſnmed to dedicate the ſame to your Royal Majeſty, becauſe the matter of it pertaineth to your conſideration, and becauſe there is adjoyned alſo a Treatiſe about Civil Government, and becauſe of the ſingular joy and hopes I have of your aſcending into the Throne, and because the Author was a special lover of your Royal Father (of blessed memory) and of your Majesty, the fall of whom stuck so close and neer unto him, and wrought in him so deep sorrow and affliction, that it is thought to have been the principal cause of his death. Let your Majesties Gracious acceptation countenance the work.

Now the God of all Grace and Mercy, who hath raised up your Majesty into the Throne of Royal Government, and hath in so doing begun to shine upon his people with unexpected light arising out of darkness, confirm and establish you upon your Throne, and crown you with grace, prosperity and glory, unto his own everlasting praise, the beauty and enlargement of the Church, and to the laying a foundation of higher advancement of your self in the future world then can be here expected, This is, and shall be the constant prayer of,

Your Majesties most Loyal servant and subject

THOMAS PARKER,

a Minister of the Gospel, though unworthy, and Pastor to the church of Newbury in New England.

Written from Newbury in New England August. 6. 1660.

TO THE READER.

Gentle Reader,

Thou mayest not expect this work should be so perfect and exact, as if the Author had been living to put it out himself. The original Copy also was lately lost in a ship foundred at Sea; and he wrote this Treatise in the last half year of his life, which was a time of continual weakness and sickuesse ending in his death. I did often press him long before to set down his notions in writing; but he was still averse, until the foresaid half year of his last continuance on earth. Notwitstanding all these discouragements, I thought it not meet to deprive thee of the use of this his last labour, because I conceived it would be very useful for the present times. The Author, Mr. James Noyes (my worthy colleague in the Ministry of the Gospel here) was a man of singular qualifications, in piety excelling, an implacable enemy to all heresie and schism, and a most able warriour against the same. He was of a reaching and ready apprehension, a large invention, a most profound judgment, a rare, and tenacious, and comprehensive memory, fixed and unmovable in his grounded conceptions, sure in words and speech without rashnesse, gentle and mild in all expressions, without all passion or provocative language; and as he was a notable disputant, so he never would provoke his adversary saving by the short knocks, and heavy weight of argument. He was of so loving, and compassionate, and humble carriage, that I believe never any were acquainted with him, but did desire the continuance of his society and acquaintance. He was resolute for truth, and in defence thereof had no respect to any persons. He was a most excellent Counsellor in doubts, and could strike at a haires breadth like the Benjamites, and expedite the intangled out of the briars. He was couragious in dangers, and still was apt to believe the best, and made faire weather in a storm. He was much honoured and esteemed esteemed in the Countrey, and his death was much bewailed. I think he may be reckoned among the greatest worthies of this age. Upon the rising of our late usurpers, and the beheading of our most gracious and most excellent King Charles the first of blessed Memory by a villanous stroke, and under a wicked pretence of Justice, & upon the defeating of our renowned King Charles the second (whom God preserve) he fell into such a depth of sadnesse and sorrow of heart that it hastened his death as was believed. So he died in the 48th. year of his age, Octob. 22. 1656. He left behind him this posthume, imperfect and incompleat, which if he had lived he would have perfected, with the addition of many rare and excellent notions, for the enlightning and discovery of truths; which having now lost, we have cause to bewaile our sins which keep good things from us; and we are to be thankful for what we do enjoy. But I cease to trouble thee any further, and end, Resting,

Thine in the Lord

August. 6.

1660.

THO. PARKER,

Pastor, though unworthy of the Church at Newbury in New England.

The chief

PROPOSITIONS

debated in the following

TREATISE.

THat the whole visible Church is one integral body. pag. 2.

Right to ordinances depends not on consociation with particular Churches. p. 19.

One particular Church may consist of many Congregations. p. 26.

Elders essential to the being of particular Churches. p. 27.

Election by the Church not essential to the constitution of Elders. p. 32.

Ordination of Elders by common members unlawful. p. 38.

Common members may not govern by suffrage together with their Elders. p. 42.

Elder preach the Gospel by way of Office. p 57.

And that unto all the world as occasion serves. p. 58.

And are also Elders unto all Churches as occasion serves. 59.

Private

Private men may not preach in the Church. p.60.
Bishops according to Christs institution. p.62.
The subordination of Ecclesiastical power to Civil. p.69.
The subordination of Civil and Ecclesiastical power to Christ. p.76,78.
The Rule of admission into the Church. p.82,83
All Elders are teaching Elders. p.85

Reader,

This Copy being not written by the Author, but by an unlearned Scribe, there are many Errata's in it which thy own attention will discover and amend. These following I could not but amend to thy hand.

Pag. 7. line 1. dele, is not and yet, ibid. line 19. dele Not. p. 32. l. 10. for which r. with. p. 37. l. 3. r. to themselves.

A Disputation Concerning The Church.

1. MY desire is to cast in my mite for the clearing of some present controversies, I may not enlarge by reason of many infirmities, and for want of books, and all other accommodations and furniture, errare possum, hæreticus esse nolo. I shall endeavour through grace to keep channel of truth, though it be true veritas odium parit, I do hope some gracious councell will shortly determine mens private apprehensions.

Concereing the unity of the Church.

Prop. 1.

THe militant Church of Christ, is one integral body visibly indued by Christ with Church power. The Apostles were Catholick members, not members of one particular Church more then another. And there is a Catholick Church power to make Catholick members. Secondly, They were Catholick elders. Therefore there was a Catholick Church power, and there is the same need to the end of the world. Thirdly, The visible Church is one City, a City hath its policy. Eph. 2. 12. 29. Ezek. 48. 35. Every gate, which represents particular Churches, admitted into the City. Rev. 21. 1. 2, 20, 4. One house and family. 1 Tim. 3. 15. Ephes. 2, 12. 19. One body, having its visible head, and integrall parts for government. 1 Cor. 1, 13. and 10. 17. one olive tree: Rom. 11. 17. one Temple, Ezek. 43. 11, 12. one Mother, 4. 25. one floore, Mat. 3. 12. one Kingdome, Mat. 16. 19. one Church, Mat. 16. 18. on Court, Rev. 11. 2, 3. one candlestick, Ezek. 4. 3. one Jerusalem. Gal. 4. 25. Rev. 11. 1. 2. & 21, 1, 2. one Bride or spouse, Rev. 21. 1, 2. one net Mat. 13. 47. 6. Cornelius, the Eunuch Lidia; the Jaylor, were admitted Catholick members into no particular Church in specialty. 7 all particular members are Catholick members. 1. Cor. 10. 17, and 12, 13. 8 all mi-miniſters of particular Churches are Catholick miniſters Mat. 28. 19. 1 Cor. 5, 5. and 10. 17. and 12. 13. They have commiſſion for all Nations, they excommunicate out of all Churches, 9. All viſible diſciples are to be baptized as Catholick members into the name of the Father, Son and Holy-Ghoſt. Without mention of being baptized into a particular Church Mat. 28. 19. 10. all members have a Catholick right to ordnances in all Churches in way of communion, therefore are Catholick members. The power of a particular Church cannot give Catholick power, as ſuch, 11. Catholick communion argues Catholick union. Thus catholick union is politick, becauſe the communion is politicall. The adminiſtration of the ſeales implyes power, and if there be a politick union and communion in power, why not alſo in power of juridiction (Salva eccleſiarum particularum juridiſtione) 12. One viſible covenant implied in the profeſſion of faith doth make one viſible Church, oue mutuall covenant in a republick makes one politick body, one mutuall covenant of many Cities, make one repulick, many perfect republicks, may become one by mutuall covenant, 13. The church is ſo one body, that every member hath freedom in every congregation. Such as are united in a republick, uſe to be excluded from freedom in particular corporations though, part of the ſame republick. The Church is ſo one body, that a member caſt out of any part, is cut off from the whole, from Chriſt the head, from the Kingdom of Chriſt. In a republick one may be ejected out of one corporation and out of one City, and yet be admitted into another, 14. The union myſtical maketh one church mistycally therefore the union visible by profession; by implicit covenant maketh one body visibly. Visible profession doth unite all members and churches in power of order, why not also in power of jurisdiction? 15. An implicit covenant is sufficient to make a particular church therefore to constitute a catholick church also. And in the acts of the Apostles the implicite covenanting was directed to the catholick church as much as to any particular, so far as the text speaks, yea somtimes the catholick onely as appears by the admission of Lidia, Cornelius, and such like Acts. 8. 37. as some are admitted by implicit covenant, so children are borne into the church without any personall covenant at all. A Servant by covenanting with his master, doth thereby bind himself sufficiently to hold fellowship with all his fellow servants, 16. We are joyned to Israels covenant, and so made one catholick church, uniting all to one high Priest and Temple and City. And it appears not to be altered by Christ in this respect, 17. The church of the Jews was a type & patterne of the christian church Ezek. 41. and 42. Rv. 11. 12. and 21. 18. christ is one visible head, husband, Master of the family, one Bishop one King, &c. one body in propriety, hath but one head, one husband hath but one wife Ecclesiæ non est Resp. non aristocratia sed regnum Beza Epist. 83.

Act. 12 13. Eph. 3. 21. 1 Tim. 3. 15. Rom. 12. 4. 5.

Object. A King may be King to more Kingdomes then one, and so be a part or member politickly in more Kingdomes then one.

Answ. Then it ariseth from some dividing and particular relation and covenant made to each particular Kingdome. But Christ is King and head to the church

Church by no particular and dividing relation and covenant made to each church, Christ is a visible head and the Apostles were visible elders to all churches as united in one and the same covenant, not as divided by any constitution essentially distinct in compleat and perfect societies. The Apostles were members of the catholick church though they had right and power in all churches, the Scriptures make christ the head of one body, as well as of many, a King of one Kingdom not of many the King England is King of England and Scotland as two Kingdomes essentially divided.

Object. Christ is a mistycall head.

Answ. Christ is also a visible head of the church, being intelligible. Mediante sensu. 1. He is man aswell as God, and the King of Israel as man, therefore he is a visible head, 2. If Christ be not a visible head, the visible church is a body without a head proportionate, 3. Moses a type of Christ was a visible mediator to whom the tribes assembled, Numb. 10.44. Christ was a visible head when he dwelt on the earth, and he is now only gone into a far countrey, 5. He is represented by visible Kings, and Prophets, and reason forceth us to make these visible representations of a visible head only. As Adam was a visible head to Eve, and Christ is our head and husband and flesh of our flesh, and bone of our bone typified in Adam. Ephes. 5. 30. 6. The church is described as having a visible Prince, Ezek. 45. 7. 46. 10 7. Christ became man that he might be the more futable, and enjoyable head to his Church. He is not invisible because absent, Christ is now seen only in heaven, because, of his bodily presence, yet visible on earth because of his humane essence Heb. 2. 17.

Ob. The church is called one as a genus in a generall sence.

Answ. A genus is such a mysterions notion in Logick that in probability the Scripture, wich sutes it self to the vulgar, doth not make such frequent use of it. Secondly, it hath been supposed, that a genus is predicated in compleatly of its species. It was never yet determined by any councel that a numerical difference is specifical and that individuum is species. Genus contractum est pars speciei. The church of Christ is one really existing, one visible thing imediatly as hath been shewed in the similitude of one City, one body. &c. Genus est unum ratione, multiplex ex parte rei. Omnis res est singularis, Genus est idem physice cum speciebus. A Genus is immediately invisible as being unum ratione tantum. 4. Though the church may hold forth a genericall notion, yet the church of God, the church of Christ, and the church in our common language, do denote an individuum determinatium, my house and my church and the house of God (as the Scripture speaks, 1 Tim. 3. 5. Mat. 16. 18) are demonstrative and individual notifications according to our usual speech, and when we speak properly at least. The mystical church is one integral body, therefore also the visible is one, and consequently spoken of as one integral body, unless some reason proves the contrary. 5. A church indued & describ'd with apostles prophets &c. is not a general church because it is not applicable to or predicable of the present church. But a genus of a church is aplicable to or predicable of all churches at all times. Every particular church is not a church indued with apostles & prophets: but every church is a church, 6. That church which is the imediate subject of officers, is not a genus or generical church, because a genus doth not imediately exist. But the church

Eph. 2. 19. Act. 2. 4. 7.

church ſpoken of *Mat.*16.18. &1*Cor.*12.28.is not & yet is the ſubject of offices. It is not a particular church, becauſe apoſtl's were not parts of a particular church, nor were the Keysgiven to Peter & the other apoſtles in reference to on particular church, the church of Chriſt conſidered as one integrum, may be ſaid to have in it Appoſtles and Prophets and in all ages, becauſe the ſame integral body in ſubſtance remaines: and alſo in one age, and not in another, becauſe it may be altered in circumſtances, 7. That church which doth immediately exiſt is not a genus. Genus exiſtit. in individuis. But the catholick church in Scriptures doth immediately epiſt. as having catholick children, as being mother of catholick children. The root and body of the olive do Exiſt before the branches. The univerſall church is cauſally before particular churches ſucceding. A preceeding univerſal church doth exiſt before ſucceeding particular church and the vertue and power of the univerſal church did primarily exiſt in the apoſtles Chriſt the head could not derive & preſerve the power of the Keys in one Peter alone. 8 The catholick church doth immediately act, admit and excommunicate, diſpenſe the ſeales, and as hath been ſhewed Actus ſunt ſingularium. 6. It is compar'd to one individual body with its memers and their offices 1*Cor.* 12,13. 28. 9. 10. It is one body politick by covenant, as hath been ſhewed. 11. It hath one viſible head immediately, Chriſt the Lord, therefore it is by proportion a viſible body. There had need be logicall catechiſmes to mantaine independent churches. The notionall, genericall church may not be a ſufficient baſis to bear up the independent ſchiſme againſt a nationall or an univerſall church. Independency doth teare the coat, the body of Chriſt into pieces. It cuts, hacks and hews

the

the fat olive into chips or blocks. It doth dis-ject the stones of Gods visible Temple, 12. That church into which Paul and the Corinthians were baptized together was not a particular church. Paul was not baptized into the same Particular body; into the particular church at Corinth, if into any, 1 Cor. 12. 13. Neither was the church a generall church, because it is describ'd as visible by visible elders, actions and offices, ver. 24.

Object. The Apostles were members in all particular churches, and Elders in all particular churches, and so in the church of Corinth. 1. Cor. 12. 27.

Answ. 1 That church into which the Apostles were baptized together with the Corinthians was not the church of Corinth nor any other particular church, 2 The Apostle would have said that God had set apostles, &c. In your church, if he had meant the church of Corinth. 3. Why should the Apostle call the church of Corinth (the church,) 4 Why should we restrain the setting of the apostles in the church, to the church of Corinth, sith they were such catholick elders, and over all Churches. The apostles were not members and elders in the church of Corinth as such by speciall relation.

We are all members in all churches respectively, but not absolutely, in a generall sence as catholick members of a particular church. All naturall grounds of fellowship in particular churches, for more ordinary execution, do require fellowship in the whole catholick church for lesse ordinary execution, occasionally; as brotherly union, Christian profession, mutuall edification, celebration of the name of Christ,

It

It is generally ſuppoſed that churches have generally power to act in way of counſel judicially & authoritatively conjunctim. And if this be granted, it followes that the church is one politick body viſibly. Operatio ſequitur eſſe. The Apoſtles and extraordinary Elders did act judicially, they made laws or decrees, and made uſe of their own names in way of authority in all churches, Act. 15. And ſucceeding elders have the ſame commiſſion, except wherein they are by ſome apparent inſtitution limmitted in other texts, Mat. 28. 28. In Synodo eſt authoritatis apex totius eccleſiæ unitas, ordinis firmamentum. Leid. Prof. de conciliis. Eccleſia catholica eſt viſibilis tota ſimul, etſi nondum viſa. Multi ſumus paſtores, ſed unum paſcimus gregem Cypr.

Object. Apoſtles &c. may be ſaid to be ſet in the catholick viſible church (1 Cor. 12. 28.) mediately, mediantibus particularibus Eccleſiis:

Anſw. 1. The apoſtles were in all particular churches alike. 2. They were moſt of them precedent to all particular churches, as chriſtians in diſtinction from the Jewiſh church. 3. They had catholick power which could not ariſe from relation to a particular church. 4. We may as well ſay that they were ſet in the catholick church immediately, no reaſon enforcing the contrary. 5. We may better ſay they were immediately ſet in the catholick church, becauſe it is more obvious without a diſtinction, and becauſe non eſt diſtinguendum ubi ſcriptura non cogit. 6. They were ſet in the church as part of the church into which they were baptized. The Apoſtle applies this verſe to what he had diſcourſed concerning the members and part of the Church before, now the apoſtles were parts of no particular church in ſpeciall. 7. Other arguments ments prove that Apostles speaks elsewhere of constituting elders and members in the catholick church immediatly, and therefore well may this text be likewise interpreted.

Object. The Church mysticall may be meant.

Answ. 1. The apostles wrote to the visible church in all their Epistles immediatly, and elsewhere were wont to speak of the visible church usually, and there is no need to understand the apostle otherwise, when he speaketh of the church as catholick. 2. They speak of the visible church in the Judgment of charity, as if all in the visible belonged to the mysticall. They call all Saints, and count all elect in opposition to judiciall evidence of the contrary, and for as much as the mysticall is in the visible, though the visible be not in the mysticall, it is common to describe the visible church by the properties and characters of the mysticall, Jer. 31.32. and 32.39, 40. 3. If there be any Catholick visible church, why may we not understand that as well as the mysticall here, where the Apostles speak of a catholick church. 4. The Apostles were baptized into the visible church immediatly, and all elders are set in the visible church imediately. None are of the mystical church. Nisi mediante ecclesia visibili. And what need of clearing the apostle by such a distinction, while it is clear and obvious to understand by one body and church the visible catholick church. 5. All the Corinthians were not baptized into the mystical church, unless they were all found in the faith, neither could the Apostle speak so of all visible members in the Corinthian Church, but by the Judgment of Charity. 6. The similes, one City, one field, and one fold, &c. do na-naturally represent a visible Church, and there is no reason to restrain and confine them to the invisible. 7. It is described as one visible by its visible elders, and by its visible various and distinct gifts. If one describes a man by his eyes and hands &c. He surely intends to describe him as consisting of a body, Ephes. 4. 4, 11, 12. 1 Cor. 12. 13, 28. Mat. 16. 18. Many other arguments are forcible to me to evince a catholick visible and politick church, above specified. Visible church-acts are immediately both from and upon the church as visible. Independent practise doth teare the Catholick church in pieces, and together with its principles and distinctions doth interre it also. 9. This church was in danger of being cut off, Rom. 11. 17. 10. It was capable of schisme, 1 Cor. 13. 11. This Church did communicate in the seals, It did herein act as visible. 12. This church was sealed into the covenant, and that covenant was visible as well as invisible, Gen. 17. 7. 1 Cor. 12. 12, 13.

1 Cor. 12. 13, 24. 25. Eph. 4. 16. John 17. 16. Mat. 13. 44. 1 Cor. 12. 26. 13. 8. & 1. 8. 1

Prop. 2.

MEmbers of the catholick Church, have immediate right to Church ordinances as occasion requires in opposition to necessary dependance on particular Churches for Membership.

1. Members of a Church which hath immediate power to dispense Church ordinances, have immediate right to church ordinances. Catholick members are members of such a Church. The major is true, because power to dispense ordinances, requires proportionate priviledge in members.

The minor is true, becauſe power to diſpenſe ordinances is proper to a church, or common to every Church. Rev. 11. 1. Rom. 9. 4. Mat. 16. 18. and 18, 17. churches have the ſervice of God. The church hath Keys of the Kingdome, and power to excommunicate immediately for any thing the text ſpeaks to the contrary.

2. Thoſe that are Church members, have immediate right to Church ordinances. Catholick members are church members, the major is true, becauſe Church priviledge is proper to Church members, and church power to Church officers; the minor is true, becauſe a catholick church hath catholick members.

3. Such power as miniſters of particular churches may have, ſuch right Catholick members have to partake of ordinances, Miniſters of particular churches may have immediate catholick power to diſpenſe ordinances, the minor is true, becauſe Miniſters of particular churches have catholick power to diſpence ordinances to members of other churches, this power is catholick. A particular church cannot give power in other churches, becauſe power is a proper conſequence of the form of the church; and a particular Church can give no other power then is correſpondent to a particular form, Nihil poteſt dare quod non habet, one man hath not power over another as a man. This Catholick power may be alſo immediate in Miniſters, Miniſters may be Miniſters though actually relating to no particular churches. Mat. 28. 28. And catholick memberſhip doth not neceſſarily depend on particular memberſhip, one may be a member of a Kingdome, and yet of no paticular corporation.

ration. It doth not depend neceſſarily in way of efficiency, for one may be a member Catholick, though never a member of any particular church; we are now made members for the general, mediante eccleſia particulari, but it is not neceſſary abſolutely, as appears by primitive and apoſtolical practiſe, nor now. But a particular church as ſuch, is to Catholick memberſhip, but as a part of the catholick, and acts the power of the catholick. The leſſer cannot give the greater; the Major is clear, catholick power ſuppoſeth ſome anſwerable ſubject of power catholick, quoad receptionem as well as quoad diſpenſationem.

4. Such as have right to receive ordinances in all churches, are indued with right as catholick members. Members of Particular churches, have immediate right to receive ordinances in all churches. Members do not receive in other churches as made members of every church in which they receive, nor as members of any particular church neceſſarily. Particular memberſhip as ſuch, gives not power or priviledge catholick, as hath been ſhewed. A members priviledge depends on church power. Ordinances are both diſpenced and received by church-power. A particular church-power, as ſuch, cannot give catholick right, nor is neceſſary thereto.

5. They that have immediate right to the Lords Supper have immediate right to ordinances. Catholick members have immediat right to the Lords Supper. The minor is true, all members have right as catholick members, and though of no particular church, as hath been ſhewed; all communicants are confirm'd to be of one body as catholick members. 1 Cor. 10. 16, 17.

16, 17. As all christians are baptized and grafted into one body catholick, and visible, as well as into any particular church, so are they grafted into one body catholick, as well as into any particular church at the Lords table; all christians are feasted at the Lords table, and baptized as catholick members, partly: not onely as particular members. Paul is confirm'd to be one of the body together with the Corinthians, and Paul was onely a catholick member, and confirmed a member only of the catholick body. One may be a catholick member and not a member of a particular church, though not a member of a particular, but he must also be a catholick member; Now if Paul was a catholick member onely, and had right as a catholick member only, then other catholick members might receive also as catholick, though only catholick members together with Paul.

6. Disciples though no members of particular churches have immediate right to ordinances. Catholick members are such disciples, the major is true. It is enough if one be a disciple, for the enjoying of baptisme, Mat. 28. 29. This text doth not limit baptisme by membership in some particular church, nor any other text elsewhere, therefore it is enough to be christs Disciple, and to be a disciple visibly requireth at the most but a profession of being Christ schollar in the way of faith, and an implicit acceptance of the church by him that baptizeth; according as the Minister baptizing maketh known his intention to baptize a professor, so he implyeth the churches acceptance of the profession.

7. Our

7. Our conſociation is a church ordinance, catholick members have immediate right to conſociate into church fellowſhip, the major is true, that ordinance which doth depend on church power is a church ordinance; conſociation doth depend on church power, the minor is true, becauſe members conſociated into church fellowſhip, do act by the power of the catholick church as catholick members, for ſo far they have being and opperation from the catholick church. Opsration flows from being, and both being and operation flow from the ſame efficients. Particular churches are members of the catholick church, therefore they do act by the power of the catholick church. The church is compared to the body of a Man, and to an Olive tree, and an inferior member in the body or branch in a tree, doth act by an antecedent power of ſome principal members in the body, or by a power pre-exiſting in the root of a tree. The power of the univerſal church was given to the Apoſtles from Chriſt the head, and by them as principall members diffuſed into particular churches. The power of the univerſall was in the Apoſtles intenſively. A particular church hath the power of Chriſt in the apoſtles, the power of the univerſal church, and the conſociation of members thereby, for its cauſes. The catholick church, or Jeruſalem which is from above, as the mother of us all, Its power did exiſt in Chriſt, in the apoſtles, before it ſelf was in being. The greater can give the leſſer, though the leſſer can not give the greater.

Eighthly, What right non-members have to church-ordinances belonging to non-members, ſuch right catholick members, have to ordinances belonging to members. Non-members have immediate right to ſome some ordinances, as to the preaching of the Gospel, and to admission upon sutable profession of the Gospell. A ministerial preaching is a church ordinance. Apostles and all elders have commission to preach to all Nations, Mat. 28. 19.

Ninthly, The members of the church which doth derive church priviledges to particular churches, have immediate right to ordinances, The catholick church doth so. The major is true because of the rule, de omni per se. Fire is immediatly hot as the first subject of heat, even every sparke of fire, And the more any thing doth partake of fire, the more it prtakes of heat also. The minor is true, because members of particular Churches, have right in all churches from the catholick. They that act by catholick power, have their being from catholick power so farre. The church catholick is formally a church, and therefore fromally indued with power.

Tenthly, Members that have immediate right to baptisme, have immediate right to church ordinances. Catholick members have such right. Cornelius the Jaylor, Lydia, and such like were baptized imediately only as catholick members. The Apostles would not or could not baptize them but that they had right thereto.

Object. These and such like were baptized into the Jewish church.

Answ. Not so, 1. Cornelius was no proselite circumcised, Act. 11. 3. 2. The Jaylor was an heathen. 3. The Apostles had left the Jewish church by Gods appointment, because they were not in a visible church state, at that timeall that would not be baptized were excluded from the Christian church, Mark. 16. 16. Matth.

*Matth.*28.19. 4. The Christian church was the only church, Act. 2.47. All that were baptized were added to the church as not being of the church before. 5. When Paul wrote to the Galathians, the Jewish church was Hagar, and by the same reason, when they began to baptize into the Christian church; *Gal.*4.25. 6. Gods order doth not permit separation from a church, while it holds the fundamentalls, nor presently upon its rejection of fundamentalls. This were schisme. 7. The apostles did baptize Jews into the christian church, yea all both Jews and Gentiles, *Act.*2.47. According to this text the christian church was the only church, else Jews had not been added to the church but only confirmed at the most, because they were of the Jewish church before baptisme. 8. The church of Christ is distinguished from the Jews, as such, 1 *Cor.*10.23. 9. Jews as such were cut off from the church, *Ro.*11.17. The church that was persecuted by the Jews was the only church, else it would have been said that one part of the church persecuted the other, *Act.*8.1,2.& 5.11. It is not said that the Christian church only was persecuted, or that the Jews were baptized into the Christian church only. 10. Christians were all the church, and so distinguished from Jewes in Jerusalem, Act. 5.11.

11. Those that were baptized into the church without necessary dependence upon particular churches have immediate right to ordinances. Christians were so baptized, 1 *Cor.*12.13. admittance to baptisme made members or disciples explicitly on the churches part, *Mat.*28.19. *Mar.*16.16. *Act.*2.38,47. and 8.36. and 9.16. and 16.15. And the forenamed were admitted to Baptisme, though members of no particular church.

12. Those that are admited to all ordinances without neceſſary dependence on membership in ſome particular church they have immediate right. All viſible members are ſo admitted, 1 Cor. 10. 17. Paul was ſo admitted, and conſequently others might be ſo admitted at leaſt. And it hath been ſhewed that they were baptized into the catholike body, and ſet at the Lords table in the way of catholick communion as catholick members. Beſides a particular member is excomunicated out of all churches; for he is delivered out of Chriſts Kingdome into ſatans Kingdome, 1 Cor. 5. 5. This muſt be effected by catholick power, and may be without dependence on particular church power.

13. Viſible members of the body of Chriſt, have immediate right to ordinances; Catholike members are ſuch, ſuch as receive the ſeales are viſible in acting viſibly, 1 Cor. 10. 17. and 12. 13. Members of a particular church diſſolved by perſecution, remain viſible members as being never cut off from Chriſts body, from Chriſt the head. A member of a corporation diſſolved, is not excluded from being a member of the kingdome.

14. They that are under Iſraels covenant, are viſible and catholick members of the body of Chriſt, and have imediate right to ordinances; ſo are all chriſtians, Epheſ. 2. 12, 19. The apoſtle makes Iſraels covenant, and our covenant the ſame for ſubſtance, and aſſerts all Chriſtians by vetue thereof free deniſons of the city of God, ver. 12. Rom. 11. 17. The covenant is no where changed to us in this reſpect.

15. That church which is the mother of all believers hath members which have immediate right to ordinances, such is the catholick, Gal. 4. 26. The major is true, because it is a mother, and so must have children, and will own all visible Christians for her children, and such as are members of no particular church: The Apostles had the same power and priviledge in all churches, as soon as they were Apostles, and therefore were not members of a particular church in speciality.

nances,

16. The members of that church which hath ordinances immediatly, have immediate right; the catholick church hath ordinances immediately, Ezek. 43. 11, 12. This text affirmeth that the catholick church hath ordinances and no other text forceth to distinguish and interpret it of having ordinances mediatly by vertue of particular churches only; Besides that Church is a description of the primitive church, which was one catholick body compounded of Jews and Gentiles together, and which had ordinances immediatly by the Apostles, 1 Cor. 12. 13. Act. 2. 47.

17. Such as have right to ordinances and are by no Scripture denyed immediate right, have immediate right; catholick members receive the seals by right, 1 Cor. 10. 11. and 12. 13.

18. They that are visibly in covenant have immediate right, catholick members are visibly in covenant: The major is proved by Gen. 17. 7. Rom. 9. 4. The minor is true, for members of a visible church are visibly in covenant, and catholik members are visible members of a visible church, 1 Cor. 10. 17. and 12. 13. Ephes. 2. 19. they that do receive the visible seales as catholick members are visible as such.

19. Such as have like right to ordinances as the Apostles, have immediate right to ordinances: catho-lick members have like right. The Apoſtles had right by catholick memberſhip. Apoſtles were not ſo members of one church in ſpecialty, as not to be members of others by like reaſon. They were catholick elders, and therefore well might be catholick members: memberſhip doth give right to ordinances, as hath been ſhewed.

20. Power in catholick Elders immediatly to diſpenſe ordinances, argueth priviledg in catholick members of like extent. Catholick elders have power immediatly to diſpenſe ordinances, Mat. 28. 19. And all elders have this commiſſion to the end of the world, except wheren other Scriptures ſhews a difference.

21. Such as are immediatly united to Chriſt, the viſible head of the church, as ſuch, have immediate right, Catholik members are ſo united. The major is firme. They that are viſibly united to the head, are viſibly united to the body. A member in the natural body is united to the whole, if to any part. And all members in Chriſts body are united to the head immediatly. The covenant doth immediatly unite to Chriſt, and in Chriſt to the church. As one finger may ſubſiſt when the reſt are cut of, ſo a member united to Chriſt doth ſubſiſt though there were but that one (it were poſſible by providence) alone upon the earth.

22. Such as have viſible faith, have immediate right to ordinances, Act. 8. 37. Catholick members have viſible faith, elſe they were not viſible members. Viſible memberſhip ſuppoſeth profeſſion of faith, with acceptance on the churches part.

23. Such as have viſible repentance have immediate right, Act. 2. 38. Catholick members have viſible repentance. Inviſible faith doth unite to Chriſt and the myſtical myſtical church, myſtically, viſible faith doth unite to Chriſt; and the viſible church, viſibly, as to our part when we covenant with Chriſt by faith, we do implicitly covenant with the church. A viſible church is ſuch a one as is intelligible by the help of ſence. A viſible member is ſuch a one as is intelligible by the help of ſenſe. A particular church hath for its efficients, the law of Chriſt, the conſent of the univerſall, and conſociation, and a formall terme reſulting from theſe, is a right to diſpenſe and partake of church ordinances, why ſhould not the power of the catholick church be as effectual to conſtitute a member, in the way of regular profeſſion, as to compleat a particular church in the way of conſociation? Catholick elders were complete elders, though only catholick, why ſhould not catholick members, though only catholick, be complete members, the power of the catholick church is complete, without the power of a particular church. Primũ in omni genere, dat et non recipit, why ſhould not catholick elders and members alſo as ſuch be complete. The temple in Ezek. 43. 11. hath its ordinances and officers, and there is no need to diſtinguiſh of its having ſuch furniture mediatly. Its firſt patterne, the materiall temple had immediate ſervice in it. A councell without authority, cannot neceſſarily oblige to external obedience either active or paſſive, nor with authority without ſome catholick power, or new conſociation, & the apoſtles had the power of a councel, without neceſſary dependance on particular churches.

Object. Iſrael was a nationall church, therefore membership in Iſrael was not catholick.

Anſ. The temple was catholick for all members in the world, in caſe they would be ſubject to the ordinances of God in being circumciſed. 2. Jeruſalem was cathocatholick for all such proselytes. 3. The covenant was catholick to entertain all nations, it being the same in substance with the Christian and Gospell covenant both visibly and invisibly. It was catholick in substance, though national in circumstances, in some Jewish priviledges in the land of Canaan. It was catholick in respect of temple ordinances. 4. Israel was a pattern of the whole Gentile church, and church christian, *Ezek.*43. 11. *Rev.*11.1.

Object. One church in particular may be called the church by a Synecdoche generis, or many churches either, by an Enallage.

Answ. 1. What need of fleeing to figures. 2. The catholick church is expresly called one body, Genus est unum tantum rationæ. And where is found an Enallage in such a definite expression. 3. If all churches be called one body and church visible; why should we not give it church power, as well as to a particular church, because so called. 4. Consider the reasons for a visible politick church. 5. It is evident that by the church, is not meant any one particular somtimes, nor yet all particular churches as such. Paul is said to persecute the church. Act. 8. 3. And Paul persecuted actually more churches then one, intentionally all. The Corinthians are said to be baptized into one body with Paul. And the Corinthians were not baptized with Paul into all particular churches as such, nor yet into any one as such, as a particular church, 1 Corinthy. 12. 13.

Object. Elders are set in the church by election but elders are not set in the catholick by election.

Answ. 1. Apostles were not set in the church by the the election of the Church. 2. All elders so far as they are elected by particular churches, are also elected to be catholick elders, Mat. 28. 19. 3. All members are admitted also to be catholick members, 1 Cor. 12. 13. and 10. 17. Particular churches do so act by the power and consent of the universall.

Object. where are any catholick officers distinct from the particular?

Answ. 1 Christ is a catholick visible head, like the high priest in Israel. 2. All elders as united, and as ordained by the the power and consent of the catholick; The same priest and Levits might administer in the temple, which did teach and govern in particular cities and Synagogues. The Princes of the tribes united, had power over all Israel. 3. The Apostles were as a standing catholick counsell like the great synedrion in Jerusalem. The more united power is devolued upon any one, the more power of office is derived to him.

Object. Elders cannot act in a particular church but at the pleasure of the particular church as catholick elders. Elders are not partiall or occasionall elders.

Ans. 1. It is granted that elders may teach and administer the seals out of their own in other churches. In this respect they are occasionall and partall. And act thus as elders, though at the pleasure of other churches. 2. One elder may act only at the pleasure of his own particular Church, if there be a presbytery there. The presbytery may have cause to restrain or silence one elder in part or in whole. 3. united power may give any one elder right to preach and act in another ther church besides his own without asking any leave. 4. The reason why leave is to be asked ariseth from the Jurisdiction of all particular churches within themselves appointed by Christ for the defense of each congregation against all inferior or æquall power without it self and not in opposition to superior power in the catholick church.

Object. A catholick individuall integrall, being species specialissima cannot be causall to a particular church.

Answ. The same universall cannot be causall to any one particular church considered as a present part of it.

But the catholick church that existed before Christ came, had a power to aggregate the gentiles to it self after Christ came, A mother hath a power causall to the produceing of children, and yet is not a mother but by having children produced. And power to procreate children, doth vertually contain in it power to govern children, and Jerusalem which is from above is the mother of us all, Gal. 4.

Object. The Apostles were set in the church at Jerusalem inspecial.

Answ. In respect of habitation for a time but not in respect of special incorporation or membership. They as apostles were disjoyned from particular churchs in point of special membership. And they had their commission before there was any particular church as Christian constituted at Jerusalem, suppose many catholick members coexisting with the Apostles, though there was no particular church, yet the Apostles power in reference to those members, may be denominated church power formally catholick. Besides power ariseth from

Christ

Christ mission or commision, not from the actual existence of its object. And Christ sent the Apostles or gave them their commision to be catholick elders, to make disciples and Churches before any was made in distinction from the Jewish church. And therefore the apostles namely the eleven at least were invested with catholick power formally in reference to their mission and commision from Christ. Before there was any catholick church exhisting in particular churches or in any particular church. A sheepard may be a sheepard by contract before he hath any flock. A pastor indeed is not a pastor in relation to a flock without a flock, but yet he may be a pastor without a flock, in relation to his mission or ordination from Christ. Catholick church power did exist in members, before the universall church did formally exist in particular churches, to wit in Christ the head, and also in the Apostles as principall members under Christ. The Apostles were the fountaines of all church power and were supreme upon earth, and therefore had catholick power to enact and derive according to the occasions of the church in its increase. A visible church covenant if catholick, is essentially the visible covenant of grace, A visible church covenant referring to a particular church as such is accidentally, the covenant of grace. A particular church covenant is an adjunct of the covenant of grace. The covenant of grace doth contain all duties in it, therefore church dutyes and church fellowship.

The constitution and division of particular Churches.

Prop. 3.

A Particular church may consist of many congregations, though they have severally their elders and church power within themselves.

1. Here is no rule to define a particular congregation. 2. The church of the Jews was nationall containing many Synagogues. 3. We are ingrafted into the covenant of the Jewish church, and the institution of Christ, doth not forbid a nationall church, *Rom.*11.17. Ephes. 2. 22. 4. The church of Jerusalem that had so many apostles, elders, and members in it was many congregations for the ordinary: Else how could so many exercise their ministry there. 5. It is requisite to edification and the honour of Christ. Poor and little congregations cannot maintaine such as are able to carry on Church affairs sutably and compleatly. 6. When all congregations repared to Titus as one center of government in Crete, there was one church consisting of many congregations. Many corporations may have their peculiar government, and yet be subordinate to the city government also. 7. There is one catholick church of all churches; and consequently there may be one of many. It is a breach of no rule for prudence directed rected by circumstances to define the quantity of churches. 8. By church, *Mat.*18.17. cannot be meant only one particular congregation of Elders, because that rule directed christians to go and tell an Apostle as indued with compleat church power in himself. Therefore by church there is meant church power, whether in one congregation or in many, or over all. Besides Timothy was to receive accusations immediatly, 1 Tim. 5.19. Indeed the whole presbyteryof the Apostles, and so catholick church power is contained in that rule. For it concerned Apostles themselves, and an Apostle was to tell the presbytery of the Apostles, which was the catholick church power in the concrete. 8. There may be councells occasionally, and why not also constantly, or some other like consociation prudence so disposing.

*Prop.*4.

A Church having elders, or an elder in it, is only a church in specialty.

1. A church is described as indued with power, *Mat.*16.19. and 18. 17. Rom. 9. 4. Churches are candlesticks to hold forth light. But churches have not the keyes of doctrine or discipline without elders. A candlestick without its light doth not give light, according to these texts, a church is not essentially a church if it be not indued with power.

2. An organized body is maimed by losing any members: destroyed, by loosing principall members.

3. A church in specialty is united to dispense and partake of the ordinances, and therefore is not essentialy united without such organs as are necessary to that end. Principall members are necessary to the life of a man; A company of Christians met together to pray is essentially a church in reference to that end, and in a large sense but not in specialty if united no othewise.

Object. A Church is called a church without proper elders, Act. 14.

Answ. In a large sense a family, a civil meeting is a church, And so those company of Christians might be called churches. And they might have prophets to promove their meeting. A candlestick is a candlestick essentially without a light in it. But the question is whether they were churches indued with church power, offensive and defensive also. Qui non sunt cum episcopo non sunt in ecclesia, if Cyprian be the judge.

Object. Churches may be described frequently by elders and yet be churches without elders, and so be described by church power, and yet be churches essentially without power, Acts 14.

Answ. All will grant that power is necessary to a politick body. And as those texts cited do attribute power to churches, so no other do allow us to conceive a church in specialty as a body politick without power. A civil Society in reason is no body politick without power. Ecclesia est plebs episcopo adjuncta. Cypr.

Object. Elders united are not elected by the churches as such.

Answ.

Answ. It is sufficient they are set in the church by ordination and election at first: particular churches act by the power of the catholick electing and ordaining. And all ought to submit to elders once elected and ordained in all things correspondent to their commission, which for edification as occasion and prudence requires, reacheth all persons and places according to order. All elders have a catholick power, for the baptizing of conuerts as the case requires, for the maintaining the communion of churches in both seales, so also to protect it in councells and convenient combinations. All elders have commission to admit and baptize disciples as the Apostles did, though into no particular Churches. Christ did hold lights without candlesticks and stars without sphæres in his own hand, in primitive dayes. And every Church doth elect and ordaine for the catholick, for all as occasion serves; Elders of one Church may administer the seals and preach as ministers to another Church, though not elected by it immediatly. Polycarpus dispensed the Lords supper at Rome though he was a Bishop of Asia.

Objection, A combination of divers Churches, severs the parts of an elders office: ruling from teaching.

Anf. Elders have power to teach and baptize, &c. members of other Churches and yet not to excomunicate them out of Christs kingdom. And they may only teach some, never having occasion to discipline them. Yet elders united have power to teach as well as to rule other Churches as there is cause. They may delegate any one to preach, so far their united power reacheth to command those Churches which they rule, to hear a message from God and from the eldership. And there is more office put upon one so delegated by by united power, then he possesseth as considered an elder of one particular Church. There is more office in an eldership considered collectively, then in elders singly and distributively.

Object. Councells though an ordinance have no authority.

Answ. 1. If they have not præceptive authority, then no obedience is required further then any one sees cause. (a) 2. Præceptive authority without corrective, is a sword without an edge. 3. The church in all times have owned the authority of Councels. 4. God provided a standing conucell of Apostles and other extraordinary Elders in primitive days, and the churches necessitys do call for some all along. 5. A catholick church yeilds an authoritative councel catholick, a catholick power & eldership frustra datur potentia quæ non reducitur in actum. (b) 6. All elders have catholick power to administer the Seales to other churches, why not also to govern them, while the integrity of Jurisdiction in particular Churches is preserved. If councells be without authority, then there is no authority to relieve a minor part in any Church. They do not bind the peccant to right the innocent, unless they Judge themselves, sed se judice nemo reus, suppose a member an elder, the minor part offended, and a councell Judging on the innocent side, yet if the major part doth counterjudge the councel, it being not bound to active or passive obedience, the innocent still shall suffer, without redresse from authority. If the councell denies communion to the major part, yet the innocent is not relieved. The major part may hold communion and soveraign rule, and then the innocent party must either remain destitute of ordinances, or repair to other churches. There is (a) Who is bound to obey such as have no authority to command?

(b) according to the congregational way, there is soveraignty, impunity and liberty to sin without any redresse from authority, ecclesiastical in every particular church, & now then is Christs church one Kingdome and one church in way of united power, If it be onely perfect Repub. it cannot admit every particular church as such a one.

no

no authority in foro ecclesiastico to interpose for help, no conscience of obedience without conscience of authority. The councel denies communion with submission to their several churches. If the several churches do consent, it refers only to communion in their several Churches, and the major part is all this while not denyed communion at home by any church authority. 8. Israel had its standing councel, and was a type of the Christian Church according to substance, Rev. 11. 1. and 21. 9. Ezek. 43. 11. describes the Christian Church, as Catholick, and as having Priests to Judge, in conformity to the pollicy in Israel for substance. 10. The policy appointed by God is far from priviledging the major part with supremacy and impunity in all particular congregations over the whole earth. Look back to Moses and the apostles. By Gods providence we have decrees of Apostles and Elders in reference to churches upon record, Act. 15. The apostle had authority to make decrees, and they spake if we believe them, as exerting their authority, not in the way of suasion, but by imposition. Particular Churches have a divided power, not an independent power, the Catholik Church hath not lost but onely changed its councells. Every particular church though there be not opportunity alwayes to consociate, is subordinate to the power of the Catholick in other Churches. Every gate in new Jerusalem is subject to the whole City of God. 11. An Elder supposed in the congregationall way to have authority, leaves the people at liberty to Vote or to be neutrall, when he propounds a case to be voted; Doth not a councell much more if it be not invested with authority? 12. The major part is subject to no Church punishment if councels have no authority.

Prop.

Concerning the Power of the Church,

Prop. 1.

ELection by common members, is not essentiall to the constitution of Elders.

1. Christ sent prophets and apostles immediatly without any election by men, and he may also send elders imediately by Elders without election by members, I do not argue now a posse ad esse. 2. Priests and Levits descended from Priests aud Levits according to ordinance. And they were ordained without election by common members, and Priests together which levites were patterns of Gospel ministers except wherein Christs constitution makes a difference, Ezek. 44. 15. 3. Mission is only made essentiall *Rom.*10. 14. And mission doth exclude election by the people in its proper notion. Mission denoted an act of another to the people, election is an act of and from the people. 4. Paul and Barnabas are said to ordain Elders, Timothy and Titus are instructed to ordain Elders without any mention of the Peoples election. And we must follow such examples, as they are recorded in their proper texts unlesse other Scriptures do forbid. The word χειροτονησαντες is appropriated to Paul and Barnabas, so as properly it rather holds forth election by the extending of their own hands though though it be set also for ordination by the imposing of them, Act. 14.23. 5. The apostles are supposed to chuse and ordain Evangelists. And if they constitute such Caholick Elders: why not others also without the necessary concurrence of the people. 6. The apostles did delegate, Timothy and Titus with great power in Ephesus and Creete without the peoples election. If the apostles did thus constitute Timothy and Titus there so for a time, why may not they have fix'd them there for their whole time? This shews the peoples immediate election is not essentiall, or absolute and necessary to the constituting of Elders over themselves. 7. The constitution of deacons is attributed to the apostles, Act. 6.3. The original word is used for a compleat constitution of office, Act. 7.10. Luk. 12. 42. The text doth fully appropriate the collation of the office to the apostles. 8. The people have not the keyes, therefore they cannot give them, nihil dat quod non habet. 9. The apostlee had the keyes, both to use and to give. They only had the keyes, they & their successors, therefore they & their successors can only give them, Mat 16. 17. & 28. 19, 20. 10. It is meet that sacred things should be transmitted from Christ by persons proportionably sacred. 11. The apstles did somthing in the election of Mathias without the concurrence of the comon members of the catholick church, though he was elected for the catholick, Act. 1.14.

There were disciples with the Apostles at the election of Mathias. Object.

Ans. 1. There might be the seventy elders, which might act over all churches in subordination to the apostles. 2. They that cast lots may only be the apostles according to the text. 3. The common discipes were women partly, and as they are excluded from acting, so may all other common disciples. 4. It cannot be granted that common disciples, so few of the whole without any commiſſion from the reſt, could act by way of power in the name of the catholick Church. 5. If it had been the Churches due, the Apoſtles would have given notice to the brethren elſwhere, all being concerned in it as well as thoſe then preſent. 6. If thoſe preſent acted in the way of power, or by due and neceſſary right, how came it to paſſe that thoſe which were abſent, had not right to be acquainted with the intended action. 7. It appears in concluſion, that the Apoſtles could have proceeded without thoſe common brethren preſent, as well as without thoſe many hundreds abſent, what they might together with the Apoſtles in a brotherly way upon their occaſionall preſence, do unto the promoveing of the election, I cannot determine.

Object. The Apoſtles ſent Timothy and Titus with ſuch over-ruling power.

Anſw. Then we have the *A*poſtles example for the chuſing of elders in ſuch a manner without the people, as well as for the chuſing of deacons by the people.

Object. Timothy and Titus were Evangeliſts.

Anſw. But if the Apoſtles had the ſame power to chuſe, ordaine and impoſe extraordinary elders upon the Grecian Churches without their election, or not asking their conſent, why might they not alſo have ſent ordinary elders in like manner? It doth not appear that ſuch extraordinary elders as evangeliſts had abſolute power in all churches diſtributively from their office.

Object. Timothy and Titus had power where ever they came being once elected and ordained.

Anſw. And why had the apoſtles power to ordaine them them without the election of the churches, and not to ordain deacons or ordinary elders? And where appears the unlimmitted commiſſion of the evangeliſts in an abſolute way? It is clear, they were ſubordinate to the apoſtles. And though extraordinary elders united had power to make decrees with the apoſtles, Act. 15. yet it is a queſtion whether ſuch ſingly had abſolute power in all churches from their office.

Object. The church hath the keyes virtually though not formally.

Anſw. The ſacred office of elders which is repreſented by the keyes, is originally in Chriſt, and by him conveyed to the apoſtles immediately, and by them to ſucceeding elders mediately, ſo that it never comes into the peoples hands, they have not the keyes virtually by Chriſts inſtitution, therefore they have not the keyes virtually.

Object. All men are naturally free, and the ſubjection of themſelves to another, gives another authority over them.

Anſw. Since ſinne and death do take away rightfull Lords & fathers, ſome are naturally free in civil policy: But none are naturally free in reſpect of Chriſts mediatory lordſhip. All are abſolutly ſubject to Chriſt before converſion unwillingly, after converſion willingly. And therfore they are ſubject to Chriſts diſpoſe, & in reſpect of voluntary ſubjection alſo, all becomes Chriſts diſciples. And Chriſt requirs all to be ſubject to his miniſters, that are his diſciples. Meer ſubjection may make a civil governour, but not give ſacred orders.

Object. Chriſt doth permit all to diſpoſe of themſelves under what miniſters they pleaſe.

Anſw. Chriſt would have elders to carry themſelves as fathers to children, and as brethren to brethren, and so to content disciples so farre as it is reasonable and tollerable. And because it is for edification that people should aprove of their elders, therefore their consent may be asked and desired, and elders should not be imposed on a people, unlesse there be great and sufficient cause for such extremity.

That which Grotius saith of a civill society, may be here applyed to the ecclesiastick. Nequis in civitate maneat invitus, & libertatis fundamentum est, sui quemque juris & dimittendi & retinendi esse dominum. Gregatim discedi non posse satis expeditum est ex necessitate finis. Nam si id liceat, civilis societas subsistere non possit. Nec liceat singulis si societatis interest.

Object. The brethren did elect the deacons.

Ans. The apostles endeavoured to content them being offended in any office concern'd their estats about which men are so apt to be offended. 2. The chusing of deacons is not an aexample for chusing of elders. 3. They did not vote whether they should chuse or not, the apostles commanded them to chuse. 4. They did not vote whether they should chuse seven fewer or more, the apostles commanded and prescribed the number. 5. They did not vote at all so farre as is expressed, but only named persons which the apostles accepted. They presented them as at the election of Mathias and the common members did not vote there as hath been proved Act. 1. 23. They did not vote there with the apostles, for they did what they did as without the apostles, else why is it said that they set them before the apostles. They presented them to the apostles not with them. The apostles did not put it to vote, but only bid them consider of some meet men which they naming wished to present themselves. 6. The apostles are said to reserve power of constituting them in the office *v.*5.7. The apostles had power to refuse such as they thought unmeet. Timothy had power to denyimposition of hands. 8. They had power to chuse others without the people, had there been cause, as well as to prescribe the number, command the action, and chuse Evangelists without the people. If the brethren voted the apostles did not vote with them, nor bid them vote, nor asked their vote, nor is it said that they did vote, and why should not the apostles vote with them, or ask their votes?

apostles

Object. The apostles might have power, which other elders do come short of in election.

Answ. But whence do we plead the power of the people in election, if this example of the Apostles doth not yeild it, Besides, apostles and elders have the same commission further then it is limited by consequences and some text or other, Mat. 28. 19, 20.

Object. The people did elect their Bishops in primitive dayes about two hundred and forty years after Christ. Cyprian doth assert it stremously,

Answ. 1. Cyprian usually was Vehemens orator. 2. It is granted in way of prudence but not as virtually essentiall and absolutly necessary in all cases. 3. It is clear that Cyprian did ordain ministers of all sorts, an elder or sacerdos as he speaketh both without the presence and consent also of the people. (a) Numidicus was thus ordaind, *Epist.*35.4. Bishops destitute of apostolical gifts, power, calling, civil protection and so depending upon the people for honour and maintenance

(a) Cyprian elsewhere doth affirme that ministers are constituted by ordination and that he himself in elections did but consult his clergy and laity touching the merits and manners of those that were nominated, as providing for sufficient testimony and satisfaction from all, and to all whom it concerned, Epist. 27. & 33. & 65.

Election doth chiefly consecrate the people to edification, but the eldership in point of constitution more then the people, Cyp. Epist. 68. 4.

tenance and in times of schisme, faction, and persecution, might easily make more of the peoples election then Christs institution afforded. 5. The people might easily incroach in this respect. And it seemes they did encroach unto tumultuous & bloody elections, till Christian Emperours saw it necessary to restrain them. Hence Nazianzen affirmed that the chusing of Bishops, either wholly or chiefly belonged to the Clergy in Epitaphio patris. 6. I find not that the church did ever count popular election essential, neither doth the institution of Christ appear for any such thing.

In that I have formally supposed popular election for much necessary, and imposition of hands for little necessary, I now humbly impute it to my weakneſse in Judgement, as well as to my education, amongst such as were for the congregationall way.

Prop. 2.

IT is unlawfull for common members to ordain elders. 1. To dispence that which is religiously sacred by institution, belongs not to common members. But to ordain elders is to dispence that which is religiously sacred by divine institution. The major is clear from Gods ordinance. God appointed sacred persons under Law and Gospell to dispence things ceremoniously and sacramentally holy. The minor is true, because ordination doth dispence a sacred di-office, or faculty to dispence the seales and all ordinances, either ordination or election doth dispence the sacred office, not election, therefore ordination? 2. It was unlawfull under the law, for the people to ordain Priests and Levites, and elders, and deacons are their successors, and represented by them. And the institution of Christ doth not make any such difference in respect of ordination. 3. If the brethren had power to constitute or ordain elders, why did they not impose hands somtimes with the Apostles, more might have impose hands, besides Paul and Barnabas, Act. 14. For the exerting of power, there was asmuch cause to ordain as to name persons in elections. But Paul and Barnabas only are said to impose hands, or stretch out hands, Act. 14. 23. The Priest and Levites were types of elders and deacons, in a generall sence concerning their administration? Why not also concerning their constitution? And the Priests and Leivets were constituted by propagation and ordination from Priests and Levites, so elders were propagated from the approbation and ordination of the Apostles as spirituall fathers. Christ is the great patriarch and the *A*postles are patriarchs under him. 4. The *A*rk is called the figure or type of baptism, so Priests are types of elders. 5. It lessens the religious esteem of the Sacred office to make it so common, as to arise from the common people. 6. It lessens the religious esteem of the holy ordinances, to make them so common in the rise and constitution of the elders which are separated to dispence them. 7. It lessens the religious esteem of the holy and great God, to make such as approach so neer to him in dispensing holy things, no otherwise

Es. 62. 6. & 66. 21. Ezek. 44. 15. 1. Pet. 3. 21.

sacred

ſacred then as conſecrated by common members. It hath not been lawfull for any, but ſacred perſons to ſweep his houſe, or ſo much as to touch holy things under the Law. 8. I find no rule nor example in Gods word affording common members a licenſe to ordain. 9. It was never known in the Church of God till of late years, it is the preſumption of this age, vivi pervenimus illuc, ſed conſuetudo eſt optima juris interpres. 10. According to the congregationall principles an elder being elected is eſſentially an elder, and ſhould he not then be fitter to pray, bleſſe, conſecrate and pronounce ſentence, then the common members.

Elders are meet organs to bleſſe the people not the people to bleſſe the elders in publick worſhip and in way of power. Chriſtiani ſumus propter nos, paſtores ſumus propter vos. Auguſtin Beza allows the people only an implicite conſent in election it ſelf Epiſt. 65. and 67. and 13.

Object. However the people may not ordain, yet it muſt be granted that they ought in way of conveniency, to elect perſons before elders to ordaine them, Act. 6. 3.

Anſw. When Miniſters are ordained from amongſt a ſociety, as the Deacons were in Jeruſalem It is meet that whereſoever elders are ordained, that there ſhould be ſufficient teſtimony given concerning them by ſuch as are preſent, yet the Apoſtles did chuſe Evangeliſts and ſent them to officiate, where they were not elected, and there may be cauſe for catholick or ſuperiour power to place elders where they were not elected, and that without their conſent alſo, that are intolerably unreaſonable, If Diotrephes could and his flock did reject John's messengers, John could constrain them to due obedience contrary to their consent, place another in Diotrophes his room.

Object. A pastour and his flock are relates, and therefore a pastor is constituted by his flock.

Answ. There must be somthing to præcede the relation as a foundation thereof. And this is not necessarily mutuall consent, but may be mission of a pastor to a people by supream authority. Besides a pastor may be a pastor in respect of his pastorall office, in respect of the catholick Church, though he have no particular flock or relation to a particular flock in special, a pastor is a pastor sine titulo essentially, if the title refers to a particular church in special. And every elder is made a pastor for the world without, both without and against their consent. If before election in the congregationall way, the people have the power in their own hands, yet after election the elder is essentially an elder, and therefore not to be ordained by the people as greater in point of election. That is congruous to the office, to one or some in office. Ordination is an act both of Order and Jurisdiction also, naturally power should have been derived by inheritance from Adam. It doth now proceed from Christ by ordination, all a long by fathers, not otherwise then by sacerdotall descent in a line of succession.

Prop. 3.

COmmon members may not govern by ſuffrage together with their elders. Præter electionem plebis nullas eſſe partes in eccleſiaſtico regimine cenſemus, Chamier conſeſſus ſeninorum eſt judicium eccleſiæ, Calvin, certum eſt nullam ſtatum aut pagi, aut vici, aut urbis, aut religionis alicujus magis obnoxium eſſe turbis quam democraticum, Beza. Epiſt. 83. It is no where attributed to the church, as may farther appear in anſwer to objections afterwards. 2. Before the leviticall prieſthood it was in the hanos of Maſters, Fathers, and Magiſtrates. 3. By poſitive law, God placed it in Prieſts and Levites, by natural Law it was in civil governors. 4. God foretold that it ſhould be carryed on by elders as repreſented by Prieſts and Levits, Ezek. 44. 24. 5. Chriſt gave the Keyes of government all of them to the Apoſtles and their ſucceſſours Mat. 16. & 18. & 28. John 20. 21, 22, 6. The Apoſtles did govern without the people, the Apoſtles had the line to direct, the read to meaſure, the rod to correct in their hands. 7. The Apoſtles doctrine doth appropriate government to the elders, Act. 20. 1 Theſ. 5. 12. Heb. 13. 8, 17. 2 Cor. 2. 3. and 10. 6. 1 Pet 5. 2. 1 Tim. 3. 5. and 4. 11. and 5. 17. 1 Cor. 4. 19, 21. Tit. 15. 8. The elders are fathers, leaders, ſhephards, rulers, Biſhops. All theſe titles do aſſert government in the elders obedience in the people. 9. The Apoſtles give cautions to Timothy Titus, and ſuch like about government not to the people. 10. Our Saviour in his laſt letters, write writes to the angels concerning government. Rev. 2. and 3. And in the last prophesie, the Apostles are described as foundation stones, and all elders as stewards and governours, and as invested with the Keyes of his holy City new Jerusalem, Rev. 21. 11. The people have not the Keys by succession, nor by assignation, nor any way apparent from Christ, therefore there is no rule nor reason to give the Keyes to common members. 12. The speciall constitution of elders shews that they have speciality of power. They have the office; they are separated and consecrated by solemne ordinance, they are gifted, the seat of wisdome is the seat of government. 13. They are in Christs stead. 14. They succeed the apostles. 15. Why else are there so many ruling elders in one Church. It is superfluous to have so many speakers in a parliament, or moderators, or cryers in a court. 16. Christ requires punctuall and solemne order in his church, and therefore excludeth women from speaking there. But how can solemne order be expected, when the youth and the unwise shall have equall power to determine cases with their Elders. 17. Those texts that do give Elders power to rule as moderators, do also yield them more. 18. Elders may deny the Lords supper in way of corrective authority, why not to exercise authority over the church in other dispensations? The Keys are not divided between elders, much lesse between elders and people. 19. To give the people the casting power, is to make the Ministers like blind mens boyes, to set the cart before the horse. 20. How can thousands govern together without clamors? How should they attend? How should their hands and voyces voyces be numbered upon every occasion? How can poor men provide for their families, if conscience obligeth them to attend the numerous cases, that arise in populous Churches. 21. The Church is expressely bid do obey their elders Heb. 13. 24. All elders have the same commission to teach, admit, baptize, as the Apostles, Mat. 28. 19, 20. The angells do open and shut the gates, Rev. 21. The four living creatures do draw the wheels, Ezek. 1. According to Gods ordinance in Israel the government of the Synagogues, Courts, Cities, Temple, was by Priests, Levites and Elders.

Consilium aliquando rapiendum non capiendum uti fecit Themistocles.

Object. The Keyes are given to Peter as a believer.

Answ. They are given to Peter as an apostle directly. 1. Peter is here opposed to the Church of believers. 2. What proof, what shew is there in the text that Peter did represent believers or the church? though our Saviour had mentioned the Church, yet he saith expressely, I will give the Keys, not unto it, but unto Peter. 3. Something is here proper to Peter, because he is here described, as in other places, to be a foundation stone in way of office.

Object. This is proper to Peter in respect of believers.

Answ. Our Saviour seemes to reward Peters singular confession, more then common believers, in making him a foundation stone, and giving him the Keyes, more then the other apostles, in expressing himself thus to Peter at present, and not to the rest. 4. Our Saviour was wont to tell his apostles how he would prefer them. 5. It was office of stewardship, and of sacred order which is formally distinct from from any power imaginable in the fraternity, and therefore could not be given to the fraternity alone, nor to Peter and the fraternity together, unleſſe in termes formally diſtinct. The Keyes are a badge of office, Chriſt himſelf is ſo deſcribed, Rev. 3. 7. Eſay 22.22. 6. The apoſtles practice proves it, they only had the keyes for to carry and uſe alſo, in diſtinction from believers in common. 7. The parrallel texts, Mat. 18. & 28. do declare the meaning of our Saviour here. 8. Meer confeſſion according to the congregationall way, is not confederation. And a confeſſion doth not give a believer the Keyes, if ſeparated from confederation. 9. Confeſſion is not ſo circumſtantiated, as to intimate ſo much as an implicite confederation. 10. Peter had the Keys given him ſome where, as an apoſtle & œconomus eccleſiæ, and is it not likely he received them by this text, as well as by any other. 11. This text ſo underſtood giveth the Keyes to the church ſo, as to ſet the Church above Peter and the Apoſtles, as well as above other Elders: therefore it doth not give the Keyes to the Church.

1 Cor. 4.1. Eſa. 9. 6. Rev. 1.18. 9, 1.

Object. If the Keyes were given to Peter directly, how to other Elders.

Anſw. By conſequence, all elders do ſucceed the Apoſtles in the eſſence of government. The Apoſtolicall office as including. 1. An illimitted commiſſion, 2. Infallible direction. 3. Miraculous opperation. 4. Immediate calling or miſſion, was accidental, beſides Peter had the keyes to give or derive to other elders aſwell as to uſe in the church.

Object. Power of juriſdiction is given to the church, Mat. 18.

Anſw.

Answ. By church is meant the presbytery or church power in the elders. 1. Our saviour speaks of a church as then known, And church power was then known to be in the elders. And the assembly of elders was a church essentially in a large sense. The originall word notes only an assembly in its notation, and also is used for any assembly, for a civil assembly, Act. 19.
Num. 25. 32. Besides the O.T. is wont to speak of the assembly or church of elders, Numb. 35. Psa. 82. 1. and 107. 32. 2. Those Words (let him be as a heathen) do shew that our saviour alludes to the Jewish church. 3. Binding and loosing is applyed to the apostles. 4. The church in the text is two or three, sometimes that may be a presbitery like the lesser Synedrion in the cities of the Jewes, but it is not a congregationall church. 5. It would render the rule imperfect for ordinary proceeding, to assert that all cases are immediately to come to the congregation, if we understand the congregation of common members by the church. 6. It is contrary to parallel texts before mentioned. 7. The power is no where given to the whole congregation of members. 8. It is contraty to the apostles power and practise, the rule concernes the apostles as well as others. Our saviour speaks to them personally. The apostles being offended did not go to the people. The apostles offending were not brought to the people: members offending were brought to the apostles, not to the people, whole churches offending were subject to the apostalical rod. The apostles did not teach christians to go to the whole congregation of members. The apostles censured some persons without particular churches voting, and threatned whole churches. And if church here is not the congregation of common members as to the apostles, then not as to other elders, this text gives no more power to the whole congregation in respect of common members then of the apostles. 9. This text doth seem to intend church power by church, whether in an assembly, or in one elder, because one apostle, may be the church. An offender might be brought to one apostle, witnesse the incestuous person, And though it be a figurative sense, or Metonomy of the subject for the accident, yet it must be attended when the text cannot otherwise be interpreted. And it is frequently found in scripture. *Exod.*22.18. Deut. 17.6.7. and 19.13. and 20.10. We use to say of an Ambassadour he is gone to France or Spaine, meaning to the state or King of France or Spaine.

not

Object. Act. 15. The apostles write in the churches name.

Answ. 1. They præfix their own name. 2. They do not mention the brethren at Jerusalem, as having power to make decrees over other churches. The common brethren had no more right to joyne with the apostles in making decrees over other churches, then the citizens of London have to joyne with the parliament in making lawes over the kingdome of England. 3. The church of Antioch sent to the apostles and elders onely, as the text expresseth. 4. There was speciall cause to name the whole church at this time, because the authours of the controversie did spring out of the Church. It tended to quench the controversie, that the whole church consented to the contrary truth. 5. Its certain the apostles could make decrees without the church. These decrees are called the decrees of the Apostles & elders, not of the people. And the Apostles and elders, only are said to come to gether, v.6. Paul did ordaine by his own his own authority, 1 Cor. 16. 1. and 11. 1. and 14, &c. what respect the apostles gave the brethren occasionally, we also owe to them in like circumstances, propter fidem & amorem, as Cyprian speaketh. 6. It is said the apostles and elders came together purposely, so that the people came occasionally.

Object. The Apostles were extraordinary Elders immediately, called and infallible, and therefore unimitable.

Answ. 1. The question is concerning the nature of power, not of the manner of coming by it, succeeding high priests had the same power as Aaron, though not so immediately called. The kings of Israel had the same regal power as David, though not called like him to the Throne. 2. Though the apostles were so extraordinary, yet it is supposed, that they were limited in ordaining elders by the peoples elections. And surely they gave the people their due in all acts connaturall to membership. 3. What the Apostles did as Elders, belongs to all elders. The same reason yields the same rule. A quatenus ad omne valet consequentia. 4. All elders have the same commission, further then it is limited by comparing of one rule with another, Mat. 28. 19, 20. 5. Succession affords all elders like power to the Apostles, further then it is circumscribed by Institution. 6. We argue from the apostles practise & commission, for the dispencing of the seals, why not for a regiment also. If Elders have power to baptize and to administer the Lords supper, because the apostles did so, and because the apostles were sent to baptize and teach together, why not also to admit members, and govern like them.

Object. The Church is the spouse of Christ, and Elders are servants. Answ.

An. 1. The church of the Jews was Christs Spouse, & the Priests Kings were her servants, & yet the people did not govern. 2 The church is under Magistrates, though she be Christs Spouse, & they be her servants. Edicunt Reges, indicit festa Sacerdos. 3. The Church is but figuratively the Spouse, and being constituted of many of all sorts, unmeet to govern. 4. Elders are fathers as well as servants, and members children, Johns little children. 5. If Elders are servants in respect of Government, they must not so much as govern with the Church. 6. The Apostles, the Angels, yea, Christ himself, were servants finaliter, as serving the good of the Church, not its authority: they serve the Church by ruling it; the people ought to observe Elders by obeying them. 7. Per ordinem omnia, Mat. 20. 25, 26. Our Saviour doth only forbid a proud affectation and dispensing of authority, for maintaining of pride rather then the profit of the Church, for he propounds his own example, though he was Lord of all, ver. 18.

Object. All the Corinthians are said to judge, and bid to deliver to Satan.

Answ. 1. The Text (1 Cor. 5.) speaks to women as well as men. Women were to mourn, to separate and to judge, to mourn for the sin and sinner, to separate from it and him, to judge it executively: And it shews not what was proper to the brethren, therefore this Text alone gives no more power to the brethren then to the sisters. 2. The Apostle wrote as he preached to men and women, to brethren and Elders promiscuously, even concerning the dispensation of the Lords Supper. And it doth not therefore follow, that common members and women have power to dispence the Lords Supper, 1 Cor. 11. 20.

3. This Text alone doth give no more power to Elders then to brethren, to men then to women. Have Elders, brethren, and women therefore like power? 4. This text doth admit of distinction in point of power between men and women, and consequently between Elders and brethren, though it speaks not to it, but supposeth that they knew their rancks, according to other Scriptures. 5. All that can be concluded from this text, is the solemn declaration of the Apostles sentence by the Elders in the assembly, and the execution of it by all, both men and women. The declaration of the sentence, ad terrorem delinquentis, requires the solemnity of the whole congregation. 6. Brethren and the whole congregation may be said to deliver to Satan, and judge, because their Elders do it, the whole being taken for a part by a synecdoche, or the subject for the adjunct by a metonomy Num. 35. 31. Exod. 22. 18. Deut. 17. 5, 6. and 19. 13, 19. and 20, 10. 7. The elders are here meant in respect of the sentence, notwithstanding this text, and may be meant in respect of the whole sentance according to this text, It speakes no more of the elders right to declare the sentence then of other power, therefore notwithstanding this text or according to this text, they may have other power, and all power in way of preordination, as well as power to declare the sentence. Res præjudicata in Presbyterio, defertur ad populum. Calvin, upon this text. 8. The brethren may judge by implicite consent, not voting, mediatly by elders, not immediatly: by way of subordination and obedientially, not by way of authority, after the sentence of the elders not before it, or side by side with the elders, executively, not dedeciſſively, not withſtanding any thing in the text. They may judge with Elders as *S*aints ſhall do with Chriſt. 9. The apoſtle intended women as well as men in other expreſſions, and proportionably in this of judging. The women were to mourn, to aſſemble, to withdraw themſelves to deny communion, ſo alſo to judge by proportion in way of approbation & executive, therfore the apoſtle intended to attribute nomore power here to men then to women. 10. Judgemens is ſometimes taken for the authoritative execution of the authoritative law and ſentence, ſo Gods puniſhing of ſinners in this life is called judgment, ſo God will judge adulterers in this life. So he judgeth thoſe without in this life, according to the text it ſelf, executive authority belongs to all independence upon authority deciſive or definitive. 1. This text doth confirme the ſubordination of the brethren, the apoſtle did prejudge, and command the excommunication of the inceſtuous perſons. Thoſe that made this perſon aſhamed were not all the congregation but many, 2. Cor. 4. 6. Many for the generall doth note ſome onely, not all, the apoſtle doth not aske the conſent of the brethren whether the offender ſhould be delivered up to *S*atan or not. The many did not act upon the conſent of the whole according to the text, the brethren did act in obedience to the apoſtle, 2 Cor. 2. 9. The Corinthians could not vote whether the inceſtuous perſon ought to be excommunicated, becauſe the apoſtle had determined it, and commanded it alſo, ſuch a vote had called into queſtion whether the apoſtle ſhould be obey'd. 12. Men and women were to remit and to confirme their theire love to the perſon judged upon repentance, why not alſo in the apoſtles ſenſe to judged him impenitent, it is cleare the apostle writes both to men and women in some expressions about this person, why not in all other that are applicable according to Scripture. Men and women did also search and purge out the leven in their places and relations, to exclude women in executive judging crosseth the truth and forceth the text. 13. The apostles did write their Epistles with a jurisdictive authority, commanding, blaming, threatening, by their own authority. And Paul accordingly did prejudge in this case by way of authority and Jurisdiction and the Apostle here judged this person, asif he had been present, therefore as having absolute power without the consent of the brethren preceding. It may appear by these considerations, that what power brethren have above sisters, or what power elders have above common members, or that Brethren and elders have more power then sisters, or that elders have any more power then common brethren cannot be gathered from any thing attributed here to the Church of Corinth. I preserve moderation in disputable points before Zeale, yet I think I may say, that it is better to have one Pope then many, and to give the reynes of ambition to one then to many, to pull down a community of iniquity then a singularity. Beza resolves upon the Question, non tantum periculosum, sed etiam iniquum esse, totum cætum in suffragia mitti, Epist. 83. A faculty to dispence the Keyes, is the gift of all objectively, but doubtlesse subjectively, onely of some.

Object. Cyprian determined not to act sine consilio cleri & consensu plebis Epist. 6.

Answ. 1. He doth not say it was his absolute duty, though he might see a present necessity of so doing, a pastor a paſtor as Greg. Naz. ſaith, fiſtula ſæpe, pedo rariſsime utitur. Cyprian wanted civil protection, apoſtolical gifts and miracles riches and favour of overſhadowing great ones. It was a time of faction and corruption. Though the Law of God requires obedience, yet the perverſneſs of men is ſometimes beſt charmed by perſwaſions. Finis legis non ſemper cadit ſub legem. 2. Cyprian ſpeaks thus in reference to the reſtitution of the relapſers, which was then much controverted. At other times, he ſaith, and that frequently even to his Clergy, and urgeth, Epiſcopatus vigorem & cathedræ authoritatem. He did elect Miniſters, Numidicus a presbyter, without the people, and received penitents, renitente plebe, and commanded his Clergy to receive them to communion, any one ſingly, without the people, or the reſt of the Clergy either. It is clear that Cyprian intended no more in thoſe words then his purpoſe to act ſo, as that the brethren might ſhew themſelves pleaſed and not offended, if it could be; The whole ſeries of his doctrine and practiſe proves it. 3. The conſent of the people was more hopeful in Cyprians time then in ours, becauſe when they had no thought of their authority, but only of a liberty to interpoſe reaſon, if any were at hand, they would be the more ſilent. It was then granted according to Cyprian, that Biſhops were the Apoſtles ſucceſſors. Eccleſia conſtituitur ſuper Epiſcopos, & inde à Chriſto per temporum & ſucceſſionum vices Epiſcoporum ordinatio decurrit. Dominus elegit apoſtolos, hoc eſt Epiſcopos, Epiſcopi verò diaconos. Epiſcopi vicaria ratione ſuccedunt. 4. Where is any mention of the peoples voting with Elders in any matters of diſcipline? How ſhould it come to paſſe that Elders did univerſally ſally come to govern ſo abſolutely without oppoſition, if it had been innovation? The peoples conſent is alwayes deſirable, and Cyprians deſire commendable? Clementi patientia magis cupimus vincere, quam ſacerdotali licentia vindicare. Cyprian ſeeks no more from the Clergy then Councel, and only that as he ſheweth, Epiſt. 14. in publick meetings there was granted unto others their preſence. Unus eſt judex & ſacerdos vice Chriſti in eccleſia, was a Church cannon with him. Cyprian lived in poor times, alwayes obnoxious to the ſword, the Presbyters were prone to ſchiſm, the people alwayes over-deſirous of liberty, ſo that nothing but religion in the people, and condeſcendency in the Clergy maintained peace and order: no wonder therefore that Cyprian to ſatisfie conſcience in ſome caſes, and to prevent ſchiſm and contention, perceived a neceſſity to content all ſo far as conſcience would permit. There was not ſuch a diſtance between Apoſtles or Biſhops, and brethren, as when they came to be exalted in the Common-wealth, in civil reſpects. If Paul had not been ſo deſtitute of outwards accommodations, horſes and ſervants, ſilver and gold, &c. his preſence would have challenged more civil obſervance amongſt the Chriſtians. All children owe the ſame reverence to fathers, as fathers, but not the ſame honour to all, as members of the Republick, ſome being mean, and others noble men. It is certain the Apoſtles did not depend on the conſent of the people, and alſo that Cyprian deemed biſhops the Apoſtles ſucceſſors, and that his own actions in the Church were è diametro, oppoſite the peoples voting. What a vanity had it been for the bleſſed Apoſtle Paul to have threatned the rod to the Church of of Corinth, if they having one end of it in their own hands, might have broken it in pieces by their voting. The truth is, it was a modeſt ſilence in the people, which Cyprian propounded; It was his ſaying of himſelf, & verecundum ſilentium proficit ad quietem. Surely it is no leſſe then mockery to ſet up ruling Elders, and then rule them; and it is the higheſt ſacriledge and uſurpation to encroach on the divine function.

Object. Elders do govern in calling, moderating and diſſolving meetings.

Anſw. In theſe things they are but moderators of actions, not governours of perſons. 2. They do theſe things as ſubject to the people, in foro eccleſiaſtico, for if the people judge, the Elders do erre; they may ſuſpend and diſcipline them. 3. Thoſe Scriptures which allow Elders thus to moderate, do alſo afford more power, where the Apoſtle ſaith, obey them which have the rule over you, without exception, why do we ſo limit their power, and diſtinguiſh of obedience. 4. The people do eſſentially govern in greateſt matters. Their vote is eſſential to compleat the judicial determination. 5. The people do govern in chief, becauſe they vote with Elders, and can conſtrain judgement, and reſtrain the Elderſhip. 6. The people in the congregational way do attend government as upon an office, as if they had the office by partnerſhip with the Elders. 7. It is rational, that the people voting with the Elders, the major part ſhould carry it againſt the Elders. 8. It is rational, that the people having power to act upon their Elders offending, and to act againſt them in caſes depending, that the major part ſhould alſo act without the Elders in in case they refuse. If the people must vote with Elders, what institution gives an Elder a casting vote, where the suffrages are equal. And if they may set up a moderator, and call the Elder, refusing to vote, into question, why may they not also immediately carry on the vote? It they can question the Elder which is a greater thing, why can they not do the lesser and vote without him? (a) Frustra fit per plura, quod fieri potest per pauciora; surely then the major part is Judge, the people judges, the Elders, Porters, cryers, Informers, at most but Speakers in Parliament. 9. Elders in this way have no commanding power, as to the Congregation, or major part, because no obedience is due in foro ecclesiastico, while the people may judge, as they see cause as well as the Elders. 10. In Parliament all that Vote do governe. 11. They that do bind and loose do govern, but in the Congregational way the people do binde and loose. They do so compleat the Elders binding and loosing, that their Votes must necessarily concur. 12. Congregational principles do not rationally afford Elders power to call and dissolve meetings, otherwise then ad arbitrium populi in foro Ecclesiastico. The major part hath power to judge whether it be meet to come, being called, or to depart being dismissed. Let it be remembred that such as usurped the Priests office under the Law were to die, Num. 4. 15, 19, 20. 13. The determination of the case depends on the Vote of the people, as well as on the Vote of the Elders, nay more. 14. The Elders do not command the people to Vote, because they are at liberty to be negative, or affirmative or neutral, to Vote or not to Vote to the case.

a The Elders determination and vote doth depend as much, and more upon the Apostles vote, then the peoples vote upon the Elders for the casting of the case.

Prop.

Of Church-Officers, their Miniſtry and Subordinations.

Prop. 4.

ELders are ſent by Chriſt to preach the Goſpel in way of office. 1. They have both gifts and authority to preach the Goſpel, They are ſent, and ſending notes authority by commiſſion from Chriſt. An Eccleſiaſtical office is a power to diſpence holy things by Chriſts inſtitution and ordination, Rom. 1.5. 2 Cor. 13. 10. Heb. 3.1. Tit. 2. 15. 2. They are ſent as Chriſt, and Chriſt was ſent in way of office, John 20.21. John 17. 18. 3. Chriſt ſends them as his Ambaſſadors, 2 Cor. 5. 20. Epheſ. 6.20. 4. Their Commiſſion is fully expreſſed, Mat. 18. 19. 5. They are ſent to preach, as to baptize, therefore in way of office, ibid. 6. Paul acknowledgeth his office, and magnifies it, and calls it a grace, Rom. 1. 5. and 11.13. 7. One was choſen in Judas his place to fill up the number of the higheſt order, Acts 1.16.8. It concernes the beauty of the Church, that there ſhould be order, and therefore official preaching of the Goſpel. The world was without forme till it was ſet in order. An Army without order is a confuſed multitude. 9. Order is moſt beneficial, and conſequently official preaching: It is both for the beauty and benefit of the body, that only the eye have the office of seeing. 10. It is for the honour of the Gospel, and the ordinance of preaching that it should be dispensed in way of office. 11. Preaching is a chief part of the ministerial office, Acts 6. 2, 4. 1 Cor. 1. 17. 12 It tends to edification, that the Gospel should be preached by order and office: the preaching by common persons lessens the esteem of the ordinance, and consequently proficiency thereby. 13. It glorifies Gods holiness and greatness, that those that come so near him in way of worship, should be separated and consecrated in way of sacred office. 14. It exalts grace to set up a saving office in the world. 15. Preaching the Gospel is a representation of Christs prophetical office, Heb. 3. 1. 16. God sent Priests and Levites, and Prophets only to preach under the Law. 17. There is need that some should be in office, that they may study the original Scriptures, and the arts, and the fallacies of mens hearts, Tit. 1. 9. 1 Tim. 3. 2. and 2. 22. 2 Chron. 31. 4. and 5. 32.

Prop. 5.

ALL Elders are sent in way of office to preach to all the world as occasion serves. 1. Their commission is evident, Mat. 28. 19. 2. The world is to be converted in way of office by preaching, Rom. 10. 15. Mat. 16. 15. John 17. 20. 3. Edification of believers requires preaching in way of office, why not also the conversion of unbelievers. 4. It is meet the Gospel should be preached in way of office, if it be preached, and it ought to be preached to all the world. 5. The Apostles were Apostles to the world, therefore Elders to the world also. 6. The Elders administer as Elders

Elders to members of other Churches, why not alſo preach as Elders to new Members. 7. It tends to edification, and nothing at all offends, that Elders ſhould preach to all in way of office, it holds forth the more grace to the world. It greatly affected the Gentiles to hear that Paul was ſent by God to them, Acts 13.4,7. and 9. 17. 8. Every thing acts according to its nature, and what hinders an Elder from acting as an Elder. Elders are Candle-lights and Star-lights. A candle gives light as a candle to all preſent. A ſtar ſhines upon the earth as well as in heaven. An Elders ſphear of activity is not limited in this reſpect by his commiſſion.

Prop. 6.

ALL Elders are Elders to all Churches as occaſion ſerves. 1. Elſe Churches have leſs intereſt in Elders then the Nations. Elders are Miniſters to all Nations, therefore to all Churches. 2. Members have priviledge to partake of ordinances in all Churches, therefore Elders have power to diſpence Ordinances in all Churches; Communion of Elders is as rational as Communion of members. 3. It tends to edification, and nothing at all offends. 4. All Elders are elected by the power of all the Churches, by the conſent of the Catholick and ſupreme power. A King in a Kingdom doth chuſe bygrant and conſent, the particular Officers of all Corporations. Elders are elected by all, and for all. 5. The nature of an Elders Office both in gift and commiſſion is unlimited in this respect. The stars of heaven shine to all men on earth, and as theirs, because God hath ordained them for all men over the whole earth. An Elders relation to a particular flock, is but a common adjunct, not the Essence of Office. 6. It hath ever been the faith and practise of the Church. Quod est novum non est verum. 7. All Priests and Levites were Priests and Levites to all Israel.

Prop. 7.

GIfted brethren may not preach in the Church at pleasure. 1. God condemns such a practise, *Jer.*23. 32. Numb. 16. 10. 2. All that preacht in primitive times were Prophets or Elders in Office, so far as may be concluded from the Scriptures. Amos might not have preached, because no Prophet, nor son of a Prophet, if God had not called him, Amos 7. 14. Mal. 2. 7. Mat. 13.32. Tit. 1.9. 2 Tim. 2.2. & 1. 3. 2. Acts 15.32. & 18. 24. 1 *Pet.*1.12. 1 King 13.34. *Mat.*18.19. *Rom.*10. 15. 2 *Cor.*26. 3. According to many Texts, none but Prophets and Elders ought to preach, therefore others should not be permitted to preach farther, then other Texts do allow them, according to Rom. 10.15. Men must be sent before they preach: this Text of it self, further then it is interpreted by other Scriptures, confines preaching to mission. According to *Heb.*5. 1. The dispensation of holy things and preaching is confined to ordination, further then is interpreted by other Scriptures. According to Acts 15. 32. preaching is confined to the ſingular and miraculous gift of Propheſie, ſurthet then other Scriptures do interpret it. Had we no other Scripture that did ſpeak to the point, we ſhould allow none but Prophets, none inferior, leſs then a Prophet, to preach. 4. In the Temple none but Prieſts and Levites did adminiſter, though others could kill ſacrifices, and ſprinkle blood, and kindle fires, &c. as well as they. The Church of God is Gods Temple; and publich worſhip in the Church, is publick worſhip in the Temple of God. God doth ordain ſome ceremony as well as æquity of holineſs, to the end of the world in publick worſhip. 5. It defaceth the beauty, and diminiſheth the benefit of order: It leſneth the eſteem and efficacy of the holy ordinances: It is unſutable to the Holineſs and Majeſty of the great God, to be worſhiped by common perſons and maimed ſacrifices: too much familiarity is contempt: It renders the Miniſtry contemptible: It corrupts and deſolates the Church with the plague of errors and Hereſies, the plaguy frogs and lice of Egypt. Such as have excellent gifts may do ſome good, but the queſtion is, whether all things conſidered, they will not be more hurtfull then profitable, if they exerciſe their gifts without order.

ing

Object. Common brethren preached, Act 11. Apoſtles preached, Acts 18.

Anſw. It is clear enough that ſuch as preached, were more then common brethren. Jeruſalem was full of Prophets and extraordinary Elders. Philip is named for one of them that preached, which rather argueth the reſt to be ſuch like perſons. And concerning Apollos, it need not be doubted, but that he

he was a Prophet. The Text doth not affirm any of them to be common members, only that preached, and other Texts do not admit them to be such. An extraordinary gift of Prophecy, though fallible, was a sufficient call, for the ordinary exercise of it. The extraordinary gift of tongues, was a call for the publick use of it; it is also to be observed, if common Disciples did preach according to the places objected, yet they did not preach in the Church, but to those without. It may be immodesty, though not disorder for common members, to preach to those without: it is both, for such, though gifted and educated for the Ministry to preach in the Church, without due leave and caution from Church-power; it might be one of Johns Disciples that did cast out Devils, Mar. 9. 28. And accordingly Apollos might be a Prophet, though he was baptized by John. It is affirmed that he was fervent in the Spirit, Acts 18. 25. This fervency in the Spirit sufficiently intimateth the extraordinary motion of the Spirit in reference to his preaching (common in those times) besides, his gifts, and the practise of others, do declare him to be no ordinary disciple, but at least one indued with prophetical gifts.

Prop 8.

SOme Elders may have superiority of jurisdiction over other Elders, according to Christs institution. 1. It is not imaginable that Bishops should come by such power, as is recorded in ecclesiastical history, and that over all the world, and in way of ambition ambition in ſuch humbling times, without all manner of oppoſition for three hundred years together, and immediately after the Apoſtles, had it been uſurpation or innovation: When and where is innovation without oppoſition? Would not Elders, ſo many ſeeing and knowing men, at leaſt ſome of them, have contended for truth, wherein their own liberties and rights were ſo much intereſſed. Aerius his oppoſing of Biſhops, ſo long after their riſe and ſtanding, is inconſiderable. 2. It is evident that godly fathers did believe biſhops to be ſtated by the Apoſtles. It is to be ſeen what Ignatius hath left behind him for witneſs hereto, together with Clemens and Egiſsippus, and Iræneus. And it is ſuppoſed, that two of them knew the Apoſtles. According to Tertullian, Apoſtolick Churches bring in their account by ſucceſſion of Biſhops, running up to the Apoſtles or their ſchollars: De præſcriptionibus adverſhæret: According to Jerome, Mark was made Biſhop of Alexandria by the Apoſtles, Timothy of Epheſus; Titus of Creet by Paul: and ſuch apoſtolick traditions, according to him, were taken out of the O.T. ſo that what Aaron, his ſons and Levites were in the Temple, the Biſhops, Elders and Deacons may challenge in the Church: He largely ſhews alſo the neceſſity of Biſhops to maintain peace, that elſe there will be ſo many Schiſms as Presbyters, that Jacob and Eſau could not but ſtrive in the womb, that Rome would not ſuffer two brethren to reign together, De ſcriptoribus eccleſiaſticis, ad Ruſticum monachum, ad evagrium, proæm in comment ſuper Matheum. Cyprian affirmeth, that ordination of Biſhops deſcended from the Apoſtles by conſtant ſucceſſion, Epiſt. 69. 4. & 65. 4. & 69. 3. & 75. 14. 3. Though Biſhops

in

in Cyprians time did agitate weightier matters, as the receiving of the Lapsi, and such like, by the common Council of all the Clergy, and many Bishops together, yet they did exercise power alone also in ordinations, and in restitution of the Lapsi themselves in some cases, and in censures, Epist. 75. 3. and 40.7. & 45.2. & 62.3. & 64.4. & 65.1,4. & 67.6. & 27.1. Cyprian doth peremptorily assert, that there was but one Priest and judge, and that the Bishop was to be obeyed as the Lords Priest under the Law. He frequently commands his whole Clergy, and much more to this purpose might be urged out of Cyprian and others. But it is not mine aim to enlarge, neither have I books, nor sufficient reading so to do. 4. It is futable to the first constitution of the Church. The Apostles had power of jurisdiction over other Elders. And the first constitution in Israel, though the first Governours, as Moses, and Aaron, and David. &c. were extraordinarily constituted by God, was permanent in following ages. 5. The Angels of the seven Churches in the Revelation, cannot be otherwise understood without a figure, which is nothing necessary. 6. Timothy and Titus had such delegated power in Ephesus and Creet, why might not others also. They had not such power as Evangelists, unless they were delegated by the Apostles. 7. Singular gifts in Elders do bespeak singular honour and power also. 8. There is need of such order unto the end of the world. 9. An Hierarchy of such order is a great ornament in the Church. The order of twelve Apostles with their Thrones, is something of the beauty of heaven. Paul bids Timothy keep the commandements of ordaining, and receiving accusations

tions againſt Elders, &c. to the end of the world. This argues Timothy and Titus have ſucceſſors in over-ruling power to the end of the world. 11. According to the commiſſion, Mat. 28. 19, Apoſtles do continue to the end of the world, and therefore Superiority of juriſdiction in Elders doth continue. One Biſhop may be called the Biſhop, though there are other Biſhops. Chriſt is called the Apoſtle, though there were twelve Apoſtles under him. The Lord, though there be other Lords under him, ſo there was one judge in Iſrael called the Judge, though there were many other Judges alſo inferior to him in juriſdiction. Cyprian is confident, that the Biſhops were peculiarly the Apoſtles ſucceſſors. How came Diotrephes to rule ſo abſolutely in the Church? He is not blamed for ruling by himſelf over the Church, but for ruling proudly over the Apoſtle. 12. The Prieſts, Levites and Singers had their heads and Princes in Iſrael, ſome under Ithamar, and all under Eliazar. The Cohathites had their Prince, and the Gerſhonites had their Prince, and the Merarites had their Prince; every order of the Prieſts had its head and Prince: The ſinging Levites had their heads and captains, and ſo the Porters, Num. 3. 24, 32. & 4. 16, 28. 1 Chron. 24. 3, 5, 6. & 25. 2. & 26. 10. It is evident that among the Prieſts, ſome were Rulers, or Princes, as it is in the Original over others, 1 Chron. 24. 5, 13. There were twelve Princes over the Tribes, and Captains over thouſands as well as over hundreds, to carry Iſrael all along to Canaan the type of heaven, Num. 2. Deut. 1. Some of the Churches children muſt be Princes under Chriſt their King over all the earth, Pſalm 45. 16. Such were the Apoſtles and their ſucceſſors, in ſpecial as being ſet over others, ruling under him as Princes. 14. The deſcription of the Church, *Ezek.*44. and 45. doth ſufficiently ſhew that the Platform of the Chriſtian Church in point of Government is correſpondent to that ſtate of the Church under the Law, except wherein the inſtitution of Chriſt doth alter it. The Apoſtles, extraordinary Elders, and their eſpecial ſucceſſors, may be ſignified by the great Presbytery in Jeruſalem, conſtituted by Moſes the type of Chriſt. The ſons of Aaron and Zadoc may ſignifie the ſame, the extraordinary Elders, and their ſucceſſors in the ſubſtance, and alſo in ſome ſutable degrees of ſuperiority, deſcending from Chriſt, typified by Aaron and Zadoc. 15. In new Jeruſalem. *Rev.*21. there ſeemes to be a portraiture of the Chriſtian Church upon earth, not determining (whenſoever it begins) otherwiſe then in heavenly perfection. And this Church hath its City-Government, and Apoſtles, ſome way or other all along, as well as its angels in the ſeveral Churches. If ſuch ſuperiority, and order amongſt Elders be of Chriſt, how deſparate ſoever the preſent ſtate of the queſtion ſeems, it ſhall be reſtored again; & ipſe conatus in magnis laudandus.

1 Tim. 6. 14.

Object. All Elders ſeems to have the ſame Titles.

Anſw. So had the Prieſts and Levites which had not the ſame power. 2. It is ſuppoſed the Elderſhips and their Moderators, though the Apoſtle do not ſo diſtinguiſh in any ſalutations. 3. The Apoſtles did not give diſtinguiſhing Titles to Timothy, Titus, Mark, Luke, &c. When they mentioned them to others, or in ſalutations to themſelves. Plainneſs of Spirit was moſt ſutable to ſuch men, and thoſe times.

times. 4. For as much as the difference was not between Elders in power of order, but only in degree of Jurisdiction, it may be fully ſufficient to diſtinguiſh them, by calling the Chief the Biſhop, without any preciſe title of a different nature. Chriſt is ſometimes diſtinguiſhed, only as called the Apoſtle, the Prince of Iſrael, the head and ſhepherd of the Church, *Ezek.*45. 7. *Heb.*3.1.

Object. Jerome ſaith, Elders were all equal at firſt. Coment on Tit.

Anſw. Yet he ſaith, that afterwards the Apoſtles ſet ſome over others. He ſaith alſo that Biſhops obtained ſomethings by cuſtome, and it is moſt likely they did riſe too high quickly after their exaltation by civil power, There was not need of placing ſucceſſors in the Apoſtles ſtead, till they were going away.

Object. Church cannot be one Biſhop, Mat. 18.

Anſw. It is evident that one Apoſtle had Church power, and that Timothy and Titus had over-ruling power in Epheſus and Creet by delegation, as well as the Apoſtles. It was enough to tell one Apoſtle of one that had offended.

Object. An univerſal Biſhop may alſo be granted.

Anſw. Chriſt is the univerſal Biſhop, high Prieſt, Arch-biſhop, chief ſhephard, &c. viſible all along. Chriſt is the head and Prince of Iſrael, and Apoſtle of the Church, Ezek. 43.7. *Heb.*3.1. beſides we learn in hiſtory by what ſteps the Biſhops of Rome came to be univerſal, and alſo what great oppoſition attended his aſcenſion. A Monarch may be the beſt kinde of polity in a proportionable compaſſe, but it could not be profitable to the whole world, to be under one Monarch, which is but a man, becauſe its affairs are incomprehensible to one poor mortal, and sinful creature, Episcopatus est unus, cujus pars insolidum tenetur a singulis, Cyprian.

Object. There is no shadow of Evangelists remaining after the Apostles.

Answ. The Evangelists as chosen to be attendants on the Apostles in their apostolical perambulations, were occasional Ministers, and ceased so far with such perambulations, Yet the Bishops had some special helpers as occasion required.

Object. Apostles and Evangelists could not be ordinary Bishops.

Answ. Not onely such, but they may be the greater, and the lesser together. The greater contains the lesser. The Apostles for a time served instead of the Deacons, Acts 6. And James fixedly exercised jurisdiction at Jerusalem instead of an ordinary Bishop. Ecclesiastical history is a sufficient witness of the practice, or de facto, and apostolical practice is a sufficient rule, de jure. It seems he that was called Antistes, præpositus, the Bishop in a Presbytery, by processe of time was only called Bishop, though all Elders are also according to their office essentially Bishops, and differing only in gradual jurisdiction, multa renascentur quæ nunc cecidere, cadentque, Gods power is glorified in reparations, &c. as well as in preparations.

Prop.

Of the power of Magistrates over the Church, under Christ the Head.

Prop. 9.

MAgistratical power is above Church power, over all persons and all cases in a political way. 1. Magistrates have a supream power under Christ to see the whole Law of God kept without exception, Deut. 17.19. Numb. 27.21. Magistratus est custos utriusque tubulæ. 2. Fathers have power over their children, and Magistrates are nursing fathers to the Church, Esay 49.23. The Magistrate bears the sword, the Church the keys, and the sword naturally overrules the keys. 4. It is the Magistrates duty to reform all abuses without exception, Esay 1.25,26. 2 Chron. 15.30. and 24.4. and 29.25. Neh. 13.13. Jon. 3.7. Hest. 9.30. and 10.3. Ezek. 6.8,11. Dan. 6.23. 5. It is the Magistrates end to put away all evil, Deut. 17.10,7. 6. It is the Magistrates end to punish all evil, Rom. 13.4. 7. It is the Magistrates end to maintain all godlinesse, 2 Tim. 2.2. 8. It is the Magistrates end to maintain peace amongst all persons, ibid. 9. We have many unquestionable examples, Exod. 32.20. Josh. 22.10. 2 Chron. 15.13. and 19.3. and 34.4,33. Neh. 13.21. Rev. 17.16. 1 Kings 2.27. and 2.23,20. Judex & ara sunt idem,

1 Kings 2 3. John 1.7,8. 2 Chron. 23.1 Esay 60.10. Rev. 22.24. Ezra 1.2. Ezek. 21.25. 1 Sam. 2.22. Jud. 17.4. Dan. 6.26.

ad

ad utrumque confugitur quoties alicui injuria intentatur. 10. Magistrates are masters in the Republick; and masters of families ought to maintain all peace and religion in their families. 11. Magistrates receive power from Christ as Mediator. All power is given to him, and therefore comes from him, and is given by him unto others. And Magistrates receive power from Christ, without exception in a politick way, therefore their power is correspondent to Christs Mediatorial power in a politick way. 12. Else the Church would be desolated with heresies, idolatry, prophaneness. It is needful that Magistrates should have power to preserve the Church from desolation, by taking away foxes and wolves, &c. And their power is no where limited in this respect, therefore they have such power as to take away foxes and wolves, &c. 13. All persons ought to put forth their just power for the preservation of the Church, and Magistrates have a just power to use the sword in their hands, against any persons for the good of the Church, and the glory of Christs Kingdome, further then they are limited. Kings must serve Christ as Kings by applying of their regal power for the propagation of Christs Kingdome, Cant. 2. 15. Psal. 2. 10, 11, 12. The Kingdoms of the earth, and so the Kings of the earth are the Lords by subordination, Rev. 11. 15. Esay 66. 23. Jus fori est jus poli, vos estis in ecclesia, ego extra ecclesiam episcopus, Constant. 4. It appears by Pauls appealing unto Cæsar, that Magistrates have power in some religious controversies, why not in all. Occam therefore a great Schoolman said well, Emperor defend me with the sword, and I will defend thee with the pen.

Object.

Object. Magistrates were types of Christ in Israel.

Answ. 1. Not essentially. And the essence of Magistracy contained Priestly power it self, until Aaron was divided from Moses, and therefore remains such except wherein God hath shortened it by giving power to Aaron and his sons. 2. Magistrates were types of Christ in their whole Government, therefore if Magistrates cease in one thing upon that account, they must cease in all points of Government. 4. The old Testament is now to direct us, unless where it is altered by the New Testament. And where is the power of Magistrates repealed and lessened in the New Testament. 4. God promiseth like Magistrates under the Gospel, without any limitation or alteration, Isa. 1. 26 and 49. and 66. The Prophets do speak of the Christian Church as an antitype generally. 5. We are under the same Covenant, and of the same Church for substance, and therefore the same Ordinances do belong to us that are not repealed and antiquated; the essence of Magistracy is by no consequence repealed. 6. Greater power is not given to the Church by the Law of Christ, then was given to the Priests in Israel, therefore the power of Magistrates is not now lesse. 7. The ten Kings ought to defend religion without limitation in a politick way, Rev. 17. 16. 8. Paul appealed under the Gospel to Cæsar, and the New Testament confirms the power of Magistrates in all cases for peace and godlinesse also. If magistratical power was essentially typical, it would wholly cease now, without a new institution. But the Apostles command us to obey Magistrates, as stated antecedently to the Gospel. Many things accidentally typical do not cease in other respects, as marriage, the land land of Canaan, &c. Magistrates have all along need of Ministers for the word, Ministers of Magistrates for the sword, all of Christ for their Oracle : Qui nescit parere, nescit regere.

Object. Supreame Magistrates may be excommunicated.

Answ. Magistrates are supreame Judges, supream Justices of the Peace, standum est in aliquo primo. They do hold the beam of the scales of Judgement, of all judgement in a politick way; they may judge of injurious censures inflicted upon others by Church-power, why not also of censures inflicted upon themselves. Therefore Supream powers cannot be so absolutely excommunicated, but that they may in an orderly way counter-judge the judgement of subjects, if it appears to be injurious in foro humano. Yet higher powers ought to acknowledge themselves subject and subordinate to Church power, as Christs ordinance, and not to presume to act Ecclesiastically, or immediately to take off Church censures though injurious. They may immediately punish offenders by politick mediums, and so help themselves and others from injuries inflicted by Church power. Magistrates are Lawgivers to the Church as well as Moses was to Israel, Numb. 21. 18.

Object. Magistrates may not punish sinnes of conscience.

Answ. They may. 1. Sinnes committed by the misunderstanding of Gods word may be punished, therefore sinnes of conscience may be punished. A plea from Gods word, is greater then plea of conscience. The Jews might have been punished for their killing of Christ, though they pleaded from Gods Word, that he

he had deserved it by blasphemy. 2. Men may be punished when they sin in religious zeal, so Saul murdered the Gibeonites, and the Jews Christ, zeal argues a love of duty, and an apprehension of conscience in reference to Gods commandment. Peter was threatned with death by the sword, for using the sword unlawfully, though conscientiously in way of religious zeal Mat. 26. 52. Pauls mad zeal was conscientious. A mad conscience had need be restrained, Acts 26.6. 3. Magistrates as well as masters and fathers of families may make, and therefore execute Laws against an erroneous conscience. They may confirm Gods judicial Laws which punished idolatry, and therefore an erroneous conscience, Deut. 13.13. 4. Negligence is punishable without exception, and conscience is negligent when a man sinnes. Adam his conscience was negligent in the act, though not in the habit, when he first sinned, and accordingly punished. A negligent & corrupt Judg is punished, though ignorant: A corrupt conscience is a corrupt Judge. Conscientia est testis, judex & vindex. 5. God doth punish sins of conscience, and Magistrates are Gods vice-gerents, & not restrained in this respect, Deut. 17.19. 2 Chr. 19.6. 6. Magistrates under the Law did punish sins of conscience, and Law is not changed in this respect, Exod. 32.4. Deut. 13.13. 7. Men may commit murders, persecute and desolate the Church in a way of conscience therefore they may be punished for sins of conscience, John 16.2. Act. 26.9. Rom 10.2. Micah 45.8. Men may be punished in reference to sins of the mind, and why not in reference to sins of conscience also? Mad men having not the use of a rational minde, are not punishable. A conscience is a power of the minde, whereby we discern the rule, and judge of our actions and conformity thereunto. The soul, mind and conscience are punished immediately by God, the body immediately by man. Conscience is formally punished, though mediately as well as formally the subjects of heat from fire, though mediately by the air. A murderous heretical conscience had need be corrected, not onely directed, meliores ducit amor, plures tamen corrigit timor. 9. If direction be not sufficient, then correction is to be applyed, to conscience, to the whole man, 2 Tim. 3. 16. 10. All disobedience is to be corrected without exception, 1 Pet. 3. 10, 11. 1 Tim. 1. 9. 11. Conscience is but a natural power of the soul, therefore corrigible, as other natural powers offending, as well as the affections, and the will, and minde, &c. Heb. 10 22. Tit. 1. 15, 16. Men may conscientiously neglect to hear the Church, yea, persecute the Church conscienciously, which is worse. Men may be punished as contemptuous and wilfull, affecting ignorance, morally mad. A Master of a family corrupted, had need be corrected rather then others, because so many do depend on his integrity. A drunkard that is wont to be mischievous, and yet will follow the cups, deserves Pythacus his Law; a double punishment. If the sworn Jews had killed Paul, they had murdered him in conscience, Act. 23. 14. A rod is for the fools back, and conscience is naturally foolish, Tit. 3. 3. 2. A conscience that serveth lusts is contemptuous, wilfully ignorant affecting ignorance, 2 Pet. 2. 3, 5. and naturally conscience doth serve lusts, Tit. 3. 2, 3. The thief and adulterer may have such a conscience as to think God is like to them, Psalme 50. 29. Heathens have worshipt God by adulterous prostitutions. Men are in a sense conscientiously criminal, when conscience permitteth the perpetration petration of crimes, not onely when it commands. If a corrupt conscience maketh Gods House a den of thieves, it is meet it should be whipt out. If conscience be a den for thieves, and a shelter for murderers; It must not be tolerated. Gods own Temple must not secure such. 13. Ministers are to punish conscience, 2 Cor. 10.5,6. 14. If conscience is not to be corrected, it is because it is ignorant, or because there is some goodnesse in it, or for some other reason. But no such consideration doth excuse it. Not the first, for there is greatest ignorance in the greatest sinnes, yet they are the greatest sins. There is more ignorance of some high principles in sins against known principles, then in sins that are called sinnes of ignorance: The more knowledge the lesse sin, therefore the more ignorance the more sin. It appears that the will follows the intellect in mad men. The will doth not act like the appetite of a bruit. All lusts are lusts of ignorance. True knowledge doth hinder sin, because it forbids sin, and the will cannot but follow the ultimate dictate of the intellect. Omnis malus est stultus, omnis peccans est ignarus. Ignorantia juris non excusat. Ignorance deserves pity, but yet it doth not excuse from punishment. Not the second. There is some goodness in an heathens conscience, godliness in truth according to the Gospel, doth not exempt from punishment. Conscience so far as it argues a good man, renders one the more worthy of regard, but not free from punishment, Qui parcit culpis præsentibus, vitia transmittit ad posteras.

Concerning the Power of Christ.

Prop. 1.

CHrist the Mediator is the Head of all in a large sense. 1. The Man (1 Cor. 11.3.) may well import all men. The reason is universal: for all are subject to Christ the Mediator. 2. Head is taken for any beginning, Ezek. 16 25. and Christ is the beginning of all men, as preserved by his Lordship and mediation. 3. Governours are called heads in the Old Testament, and Christ doth govern all the world, 1 Cor. 8.6. All things are both by him and under him. There are many heads, Princes, Kings, Lords, Apostles, but Christ is the head, the Prince, the King, the Apostle, the Lord. 4. All powers receive the sword from him over all the earth, Psalm 2.8. Rom. 14.8. John 15.21. Gal. 6.2. Phil. 2.9,10. 5. All power is given to Christ first, therefore it must be from him, Matth. 28. And it is given to him as Mediator, because it is said to be given, power is not given to Christ as God properly. Christ is considered as Mediator because he is distinguished from God, 1 Cor. 15.25. 1 Cor. 11.13. 6. It is necessary for the salvation of the Church, that Christ as Mediator should be invested with all power, for else he would not save the Church compleatly as mediator. 7. All wisdome and power dwells in him

Exod. 6.14.25
Deut. 1.15.

him as Mediator, because it is from Gods pleasure, *Col.*1.19. 8. Angels are subject to Christ as Mediator, therefore all men, 1 *Pet.*3.22. Christ sends Angels up and down the world, and that as Mediator, because his power ariseth from donation, not onely from eternal generation, and both in heaven and earth, *Mat.*28. 9. It is suitable to the dignity of his person; all the Angels must worship him, the Meadiator and God-man. 10. Christs Throne is at the right hand of God as he is anointed, Psalm 45. 11. Christ as man is son by personal union, by temporal generation, by favour, Psalm 2.7. by promise, Heb. 1,5. 2 Sam. 7. 14. such sonship bespeaks Lordship over all. 12. Angels acknowledge themselves Jesus his servants, and the Name Jesus points to Christs Mediatorship, *Rev.*1.5. and 22.9. 13. Christ is Prince of the Kings of the earth as distinguished from God, therefore as man, Mediator, *Rev.*1.5,6. 14. Christ hath power by gift to send his Ministers and Angels, and spirit over all the world to subdue all Nations, Christ sends the spirit by impetration, creatures by commandment as Mediator. 15. Christ is Lord over all by petition, *Psal.*2. 16. Christ is Lord of all by institution, P*salm* 2. and 8. *Heb.*2.5. 17. All things were subjected to Christ, because he was by suffering made inferior to Angels, and conformable to servants, *Heb.*2.7. Phil. 2.9,10. If the Angels were to worship the humane nature, then to obey it as united to the divine. 18. Christ is Lord by unction, King, Priest, and Prophet, and so by office Mediator over all, though for the Church, Esay 61. 1. P*hil.*2.7,8,9,10. 19. By remuneration, P*hil.*2.9,10. If all Magistratical power were not from Christ, it should be cashiered, because Christ, as Mediator, hath

all

all power in his own hands. If Church power be all power, it is the only power to be owned in the world, Christus totius mundi clavum tenet. 20. Christ is head of the church as Mediator and man to save it, why not also of the world to govern it? Christs solitary reigning as immediate shall cease when all his enemies are his footstool, 1 Cor. 15. 25. 21. Christ is not onely considered in his Lordship as distinct, but also as subject to God, 1 Cor. 15. 27. Christ doth governe as man, and is a visible head as man, because the humane nature doth govern with the Divine. Sinful men do govern, why not the humane nature of Christ? The church shall reign over all the world, well therefore may the humane nature of Christ with the divine person. Yet it is to be understood, quoad rationem communem vel specificative, that Christ is head of the world as man, though he be visible as man, quoad rationem ultimam or reduplicative. Christ is a Lawgiver like Moses, therefore both with and under God, as man and Mediator, Gal. 6. 4. A man as man is a living creature, quoad rationem communem. Christ is head of the world, onely quoad rationem communem, if the world be compared with the church.

Prop. 2.

CHrist is Head of the Church as Mediator and man, both to defend it and to govern it, in specialty. 1. The Scriptures do sometimes appropriate Christs headship to the church, Col. 1. 18. Ephes. 5. 23.

5. 23. christ is an husband to the church. And an husband is the head of the wife, Ephes. 5. 23. 1 Cor. 11.5. 3. Christ is in special the Prince of Israel, the King, Priest and Prophet of his church, Ezek. 45.7. and 46. 10. All the former reasons prove that Christ is the head of the church, a mystical and figurative head over all persons. 4. Christ as King, Priest and Prophet converts the whole world into his church. As Apostles and all Ministers are Ministers to the whole world, so Christ is King, Priest and Prophet to the whole world, for the converting and discipling of the elect. In respect of Government Christ as man is head of the church, onely quoad rationem communem: in respect of conformity, quoad rationem ultimam: Christ is the corner-stone that is ingraven with seven eyes, as having all graces transcendently, and the spirit essentially in him, Zech. 4.7. and 3.9.

Prop. 3.

CHrist as Mediator is under God. 1. Christ is found in the form of a servant, in the real forme of a servant, though he was also in the real forme of God, Phil. 2.7. 2. Christ is for God as subservient to his glory, and therefore under God for the acquiring of the end, 1 Cor. 2.23. 3. He is made subject by mission and acceptation as God, by union and submission as man, 1 Cor. 15. 17. 4. Christs will is subject to Gods will, in the Lords prayer. 5. Christ was obedient in suffering death, Phil. 2.4. 6. Christ acknowledgeth the father to be greater then himself, John Joh. 14.31, 24. and 15.10.

John 10. 18. 7. Christ received commandments from God, John 10.18,26,39,40. 8. Christ as man is a creature. 9. Christ is called Gods servant, Esay 42.1. and 53. 11. God as considered essentially was his God, Mat. 27.46. John 20.17. 10. Christ was subject in sacrificing himself to God, Rev. 5. 6. Solomon reigned under David, Joseph under Pharaoh, Christ under God as man and Mediator reignes for ever. 11. Christs Lordship hath been proved before to be subordinate. 12. Christ assumed the humane nature that he might be meet to execute the mediatorial office in way of subjection. The person of Christ is the principium quod, the acceptation of the office is the principium quo on Christs part. All the acts of the humane nature were the acts of the person. Actus sunt suppositorum. Therefore all the acts of the humane nature in way of obedience, were acts of the person.

Object. The Deity of Christ could not be different from its self.

Answ. Yes, quoad statum œconomicum.

Object. The acts of Christ as God were acts of the Trinity.

Answ. Quoad essentiam & efficentiam, not determinatively.

Object. Christ as God was to be satisfied himself.

Answ. Christ satisfied himself as God, mediante natura humana. Opera Trinitatis sunt indivisa ad extra quoad essentiam, non quoad determinationem. Therefore the second person only assumed the humane nature, and in it satisfied the justice of the Trinity. Christ is Lord by purchase, not onely by eternal generation and inheritance; by donation, not only eternal necessity, Phil. 2. He is made higher then the heavens, by his his high authority over the Angels, or powers of heaven, Heb. 7. 26. He is said to have this high authority as made higher, not only as begotten higher. Kings, Priests and Prophets did rule in Israel under Christ, so Christ under God as Mediator, Rev. 19. 10. John 13. 3. & 17. 3. Mat. 11. 27, 29. Psalm 110. 1, 2. Heb. 1. 4, 13. Rev. 2. 26. 2 Pet. 2. 1. Mat. 28. 27. The humane nature prayed, obeyed, suffered, dyed, wrought miracles, forgave sins, breathed the Holy Ghost, and when he was glorified sent the holy Ghost. Thus the humane nature did co-operate with the divine. And what the humane nature wills, the divine nature effects. All the world is under Christ, quoad obligationem, though not as yet quoad acceptationem; agnitionem & voluntariam, subjectionem. Christ is made more excellent then the Angels, and hath obtained a more excellent name then they, Heb. 1. 4.

Object. What doth not Christ, being Lord of all, presently and perfectly reform all.

Answ. He acts according to his commission, and Gods decree, by a higher rule then is revealed to us.

Object. Why doth the world gain by Christs mediatorship.

Answ. All the world is reprieved from present execution. 2. He gives all good things, food and gladness, God hath given all to him. 3. Life is proferred to all, and that Elect before they are visibly in the Church, may be converted by him. 4. by him the means of grace are conferred. 5. By him all may hope for eternal life. 6. All are redeemed and justified by him conditionally, according to the outward dispensation of the new Covenant.

Of Admission of Members, and distinction of Church-Rulers.

Prop. 1.

PRofession of faith, and repentance, and subjection to the ordinances, is the rule of admission. 1. The examples of the Apostles, which we ought to imitate, are pregnant and evident for this rule. Thousands in a day could not be admitted, as declaring the manner and measure of conviction, conversion, consolation, &c. Act. 2.41. 2. The weakest in the faith are be received, Rom. 14.1. And some sound, though weak in faith at first, can say no more then is contained in this rule, such are to be admitted that can shew no more then Ananias, Saphira and Simon Magus, if it be likely that these did say no more then was in them according to truth. (a) And Ananias, Saphira, &c. may well be thought to receive the Apostles words willingly, which is as much as the rule required, we find that many do cleave to Novelties in religion gladly, where they have not such motives as attended the apostles doctrine, namely, without such gifts, miracles, and care to relieve Disciples, as appeared in the apostles. 4. Such as shew a willingness to repent, & to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus without known

Act. 2. 41. (a) All in the Church are probably sincere in comparison of such as are without, and have not the means of Grace. There may be an incomplete probability of sincerity, as compared with meer possibility, concerning such as are in the Church, and enjoy the means of grace under the gracious Covenant.

known dissimulation, are to be admitted. The Text doth evidently prove it; Acts 25. 5. God did thus receive Israel into Covenant often, Exod. 24. 3, 4. Deut. 29. 14. 6. Such as answer this rule are sincere to us, according to rule in comparison of those without, and because we cannot distinguish between one and another; God only knows the heart) privilegia sunt amplianda. (b) 7. It is evident by the examples of Sampson, Solomon, the Corinthians, and many others, that Christians may be sincere at the bottome, and yet want of education, information and ordinances, and by reason of tentation and constitution, especially in the Nonage of first conversion, appear much weaker then others. Some Christians do outwardly and proudly attire themselves after the Pharisaical form and fashion, not in plainness of spirit, but without or above their estate in truth of grace, were there not want of an humble consideration of our own sins, we should not dislike others, indulging our own weakness. God doth suffer all to sin, that as he, we might learn to be mercifull to all like him. Buds on Gods Olive are more easily blasted and broken, then grown boughs, and therefore should be cherished more.

2 Chron. 15. 14. Neh. 10. 29.

(b) Some without are near the Kingdome. Some in the Kingdom are near the grace of the Kingdome, in comparison of those without. 1 Cor. 11. 20.

Prop. 2.

PRobability of sincerity is unnecessary to membership. God did admit Israel into Covenant, when there was little hope of the greatest part. 2. Some are admitted, and have been admitted, though very suspitious in comparison of others. When there is not hope of the greatest part, there cannot be probability of such in particular, as are least hopefull. (c) 3. In times of declension how can there be probability of the salvation of most children at baptism, if there be not absolute probability of most that are baptized by rule, that they shall obtain sincerity, why may we not admit adult persons, without such probability of their having obtained it. 4. John Bapt seems to feat, more then to hope, concerning such as he admitted, and called a generation of Vipers. The rule of admission shews that men may be discipled, though untaught in many catechistical points, and the Apostles in their practice did not take time to catechise persons at large before they were admitted, Mat. 28. 18, 19. 5. Notwithstanding the rule of admission, or notwithstanding the promise of Conversion in primitive times, the Apostles might have admitted more in sincere Christians, then Ananias, Saphira, and Simon Magus, yea most of such a stamp. It depends more on Gods providence, then on his ordinances, to render members sound in the faith. And Gods providence doth sometimes make way for Apostacy and Jugdement. All that were admitted might have been no better then Ananias, and according to the rule of admission, in possibility: most are no better in probability at sometimes. 6. It seems most in Sardis and Laodecea were unsound when admitted, Rev. 2: 43. Multi sunt lupi intus, multæ sunt foris oves. God hath provided that the wheat be preserved, however it be disposed concerning the tares, Mat. 13. 29. God doth take into Covenant such as are vessels of wrath, as for other ends, so also to facilitate the conversion of their elect Children. God doth produce wheat

(c) Those that are in the Kingsome are nearer the grace of the Kingdome, then those without, as those that are near the Kingdome, are nearer than those that are a far off. And those near the kingdome are in the kingdom with an incomplete probability, or with a comparative probability, in comparison of such as are a far off, yet not with an absolute probability.

wheat out of tares: And the vessels of wood and stone do illustrate the vessels of silver and gold in Gods house.

Concerning the Distinction between teaching and ruling Elders.

Prop. 1.

ALL Elders are teaching Elders. 1. The Scripture doth generally describe Elders by teaching, they are to teach and baptize, Mat. 28. 19. To feed, notes teaching as well as ruling, Acts 20. To exhort with wholesome doctrine, Tit. 1. 9. They must be διδακτικοὶ, 1 Tim. 3. 2. They are such as bring the word of the Lord, Heb. 31. 8. 1 Pet. 5. 2. Jer. 3. 15. 2. Had there been ruling Elders in Jerusalem, when the Apostles chose Deacons, they might have attended on the widows, and not been interrupted in the word and prayer. 3. Its not sutable that Elders for rule only, should have such equal honour and maintenance as is required, 1 Tim. 5. 17. 4. It is contrary to Gods ordinary dispensation of power: that Elders so inferior in gifts and office, should have equal power to rule with those that do excell in gifts, and that are entrusted with the Tables and seals alone. The Priests that were so entrusted and gifted above Levites, were set also over over Levites in Israel. 5. I cannot yet find any evidence in antiquity for this distinction betweeu Elders. The Apostle maketh it necessary that all Bishops or Elders should be διδακτικοὶ, 1 Tim. 3. 1. apt to teach, holding forth wholesome doctrine, able to exhort and convince, Tit. 1. 9. It seems clear that the Apostle requir es all Elders to be teaching Elders in these Texts. 7. All Elders may administer the seals therefore there is not such distinction between Elders, as is pretended. The antecedent is proved from the former Texts, compared with Mat. 28. 19. All Elders must teach, or are sent to teach, 1 Tim. 3. 2. Tit. 19. & all that are sent to teach, are also sent to baptize, Mat. 28. 19. 8. All Elders that are sent to teach have full power to disciple, or to admit, and baptize, therefore meerly ruling Elders have not a co-ordinate power of ruling with teaching Elders, if there be such a distinction. Teaching Elders may admit, and why not do more also according to their commission, Mat. 28. 19. without ruling Elders, or against ruling Elders. 8. It is certain according to Cyprian, that the Bishops did rule in chief, and that all Elders were Sacerdotes in primitive dayes. 9. Elders are described by the sons of Zadoc, which did not only govern, Ezek. 44. 15. And this Text speaks of the Gospel-Church, as is evident. This Text doth represent by the sons of Zadoc, all Elders, if not Bishops only.

Quod est scrum, non est verum. Ter.

Object. The Apostle maketh a distinction between Elders, 1 Tim. 5. 17.

Answ. Did any evidence in antiquity appear for such a distinction, I should not dare interpret this Text, as distinguishing the office of Elders without much dubitation, sith the Apostle doth so absolutely affirm, that that all Elders must be apt to teach, and that they must hold forth wholesome doctrine, 1 Tim. 3. 2. Tit. 1.9. But sith antiquity doth not give in clear evidence, and the texts alledged do speak so expressly, I cannot presume so far as to conceive such a sense. 2. The Text it self maketh no difference in the honour and maintenance as to its degree, but only in respect of solicitude about it. All must have double honour, though some are to be considered as chiefly deserving it. 3. Those that laboured in the word and doctrine did also rule: therefore those that ruled, may not rule only, according to the Text. 4. The word προεστῶτες may include teaching in the way of authority as well as other acts of ruling, so a master is said προϊσάμενος, 1 Tim. 3. 4. And a master doth govern by teaching in way of authority, as well as other wayes. 5. The Text may fully intend no more, then a distinction between Elders in respect of gift and laboriousness in attending thereon. Thus Paul was the chief speaker in comparison of Barnabas, and yet Barnabas was a speaker, and deserved honour. Thus Paul attended on the word, and appointed others to baptize, and yet such Elders as attended on baptizing, did well, and deserved honour. And thus Paul also laboured (as he saith of himself) more then all the Apostles, and yet the other Apostles laboured well, and deserved honour as well as Paul.

Ob. Governours are distinguished from helpers, 1 Cor. 12.28

Ans. It is the intent of the Apostle to speak here of distinct gifts, or of members as indued with distinct gifts, as well as of officers. An officer is not indued only with one distinct gift, but with many. Miracles, Tongues, Interpretation of tongues, do not im-

import so many distinct Officers. The Apostle mentioneth Members eminent in gifts, together with Members eminent in office. 2. Else why doth the Apostle say Governments, and not Governors. 3. Helps do seem to answer to the gift of Prophecy and Governments, to the discerning of spirits, verse 10. Wisdome may be the eminent gift of the Apostles. Knowledge may be the eminent gift of Prophets. The word of faith may be the eminent gift of Evangelists, &c. And thus verse 28. will be correspondent to verse 8, 9, 10. And all along the Apostle speaks of distinct gifts, as well as of distinct Officers.

Object. Teaching Elders are the Doctors.

Answ. Where are the pastors then numbred, if they are distinct in Office? 2. The Doctors are rather the Evangelists, else Evangelists are left out, else Governments should have been placed next to Doctors. It is most opposite to the Apostles enumeration, Ephes. 4. 11. Ordinary Elders are no where else described by the Title of Doctors, Doctors are here set in the middest of Apostles, Prophets, Miracles, Healings, which are all extraordinary gifts, not only in respect of their cause, but also in respect of their use and permanency in their specialties. We read of such extraordinary Doctors, Acts 13. 1.

Object. There is a distinction between Elders, Rom. 12.

Answ. 1. It is the Apostles project to speak of the the gifts and faculties of members, both in Office, and out of Office, verse 5. and from verse the ninth, to the end of the Chapter. 2. There is no reason to interpret Prophecy here otherwise, then as a gift of edification in those out of Office, else the gift of Prophecy in common Members, which was in the Apostles time frequent, though extraordinary in respect of the cause, is not spoken of at all. And it seems here to be distinguished from the gift of office in verse 7. First the Apostle speaks of the gifts of dispencing divine things unto verse 9. or of edifying gifts, ver. 9. Secondly, from verse 9. he descendeth to common gifts, or to gifts of dispensing humane things. Concerning edifying gifts, he first reckoneth Prophecy, that which is competible to common Members, as well as to Officers. Secondly, he speaketh of the gift of office complete, ver. 7. Thirdly, He instanceth in the partial gifts of office, namely exhorting, teaching, &c. Teaching is a Ministry, 1 Tim. 4. 5. and Teachers are Ministers, 1 Cor. 4. 1. 3. Why should ruling else be set between distributing and shewing Mercy. 4. Teaching is not a complete office, because all Elders must exhort as well as teach, Tit. 19. exhorting is not a complete office, because all Elders must teach as well as exhort, 1 Tim. 3. 26. Shewing mercy is not a complete office, because all Deacons must distribute, as well as shew mercy. And consequently, ruling is not a distinct and complete office, according to the Apostle here. One Elder may have a singular gift of exhorting, and another of teaching, and a third of ruling, and so Elders may differ gradually in gifts, as the right hand from the list, yet not in office, because every Elders office is to teach, exhort, and rule also. He that proficyeth only, is not a distinct officer; he that speaketh with tongues only, is not a distinct Officer; he that interpreteth tongues only, is not a distinct Officer; so he that exhorteth, is not a distinct Officer; he that teacheth, is not a distinct Officer; he that ruleth or discerneth spirits, is not a distinct officer. These administrations do not adequately or completely describe so many distinct Elders in point of Office, but are all necessary to every Elder: Especially in 1 Tim. 5. 17. doth note a gradual distinction, not essentially an official distinction. aud so Gal. 6. 10. especially doth note a distinction between the world and the Church, but not a n official distinction. And as all in this place notes both believers and unbelievers in general, so Elders that rule well in the other Text, notes all teaching Elders, that do comparatively attend more on ruling then on teaching.

The Miſchief of Separation.

Prop. 1.

IT is unlawfull to deny Communion with a Church before cenſure, in ſuch as have not authority to cenſure, while there is no neceſſity of ſinning by holding Communion, except in caſe of ſuffering perſecution thereby. 1. Communion is a duty, and therefore not to be neglected, but according to ſome rule, or authentick example, which is not found in Scriptures, for the denying Communion as it is propounded. 2. Chriſt, the Apoſtles and Prophets, &c. did communicate with the Jewiſh Church, notwithſtanding its corruptions. 3. Our Saviour expreſly commands hearing of the Phariſees, and ſacrificing in that ſinfull ſtate of the Prieſts and Doctors. He writes to the Churches of Aſia, ſo as to confirm their mutual communion, for the oppoſing of Jezabel and lyars, Rev. 2. & 3. 4. Paul confirms Communion with Galatia and Corinth, in that he directs them how to communicate, and commands conjunction unto the cutting of Seducers, 1 Cor. 11. 17. Neither doth he deny Communion with particular person, before there was legal and sufficient proof, or with any Church for the faults of many, or the greater part in it, before the case was argued, though he had such Apostolical authority. 5. The rule, Mat. 18. 17. doth not admit authority it self, to count so much as a particular Member, much less a whole Church: a Publican and Heathen, before tryal, private brethen, and such as have not authority, cannot do it in way of authority without usurpation. Paris in parem non est potestas. It may be said to such, who gave such an authority; as Joas committed murder in killing Amasa, though Amasa deserved death. 7. The Church is a mother, and there are fathers in it, how should children as such, punish fathers and mothers? Jonathan may hold communion with Saul, till he persecutes him with his spears. 8. It cannot be done in way of charity to the Church. The reasons alledged, shew that it cannot be lawfully done upon any account. The rule, Mat. 18. the examples of Christ, Apostles, Prophets, &c. do conclude it. Besides, that irregular wayes are provocative. 9. It may not be done to avoid sin by participation. The reasons above specified, do shew that this is not a sufficient reason. This was not a sufficient reason to the Apostles nor Prophets. Christ commands the contrary, notwithstanding this reason. Meer presence is not participation in evil. Eliah for some end was present at Baals sacrifice. It is an offence to our ſelves, not a priviledge, to deprive our ſelves of ordinances, for others offences. It is vanity to diſcipline others, by converting ones ſelf. We do not ſin with others, unleſs we conſent to others ſins. It was dangerous for Obadiah, Nehemiah, Daniel, &c. to live in ſuch Kings Courts, and yet lawfull: we may form theſe laſt arguments thus, we may not deny communion in way of authority, nor upon any other conſideration, farther then is cautioned in the propoſition, therefore not at all: we may not deny communion in way of charity to the Church offending, nor upon any other conſideration, further then is cautioned in the propoſition, therefore not all. We may not deny communion, for fear of participation with evil, nor upon any other conſideration, therefore not at all. There was Idolatry oft in Iſrael, Hereſie in Galatia, Hereſie and corrupt manners in Corinth, &c. and yet communion was lawfull in theſe Churches: Publicans enter into life ſooner then proud ſchiſmatical Phariſees. Schiſm is feigned piety, and therefore double iniquity: Corrupt Ceremonies are polluted garments: but Schiſm is a fire and a poiſon in the bowels and hart of the Church. Dii Meliora piis ordinemque hoſtibus illum. Tantæne animis cæleſtibus iræ?

Prop.

Prop. 2.

PEace unto edification is to be preferred before circumſtantial truths. 1. Peace doth more promote Love naturally, then ſome truth, and ſo naturally doth more edifie, Rom. 14. 1. 17. 19. 22. Chriſt ceaſed to preach fundamentals themſelves at times. And he gives all a licence or warrant to flee, and ſo to ceaſe from preaching fundamentals themſelves, when perſecution hinders edification thereby. One ordinance gives place to another for edification ſake. Chriſt and the Apoſtles did not alwayes preach the Word. 3. Peace may be ſo diſturbed for circumſtantials, as to deprive us of fundamental truths. 4. Mercy is the moſt acceptable ſacrifice. And there is moſt mercy in making peace to edification. 5. It is greater mercy to enjoy peace, than circumſtantial truths. One duty muſt give place to anorher. 6. It is ſutable to the deſcription of Saints, they are doves, ſheep, lambs, little children. 7. The kingdome of God conſiſts more in peace, then in contending for ſuch truths, Rom. 14. 22. We muſt not only tolerate, but alſo indulge the weak, when we do not believe with them for edification ſake, 1 Cor. 10. 33. The Apoſtles made decrees, and declared them without giving reaſon of them, and the Gentiles were bound to obey them; the things things decreed being lawfull, though it was a burthen to themselves, while it did edifie the Jewes, Acts 15. Our Saviour did carry himself as a friend to Publicans and sinners, for to win them. 8. We must conceal some truths (there being not time and place alloted us in our mortal condition) to give place to the greater; thereby to procure peace for the edificationand fruition of greater truths. Paul preferred peace before the maintaining of Genealogies, though true, 1 Tim. 14. 9. One may conceal some truths for ones own peace, therefore for the Churches peace unto edification. Hence it was partly that Christ avoided the Jews so oft by withdrawing himself. 10. All duties and gifts may be suspended in way of omission for edification, 1 Cor. 12. 7. & 14. 26. Rom. 14. 17. 19. Christ and the Apostles first taught truths of greatest concernments, Heb. 6. 1,2. Rom. 14. 1. Such as are contentious for lesser truths, are apt to be zealous for errors: Peace is especially to be maintained, with such as being in authority are defenders of truth. It is better to lay by some truths, then by contention to weaken the authority of such as are defenders of truth in fundamentals; Plura sunt optanda quam præstanda. A Church that ceaseth not to be a Church by providence, or ordinance, ceaseth not to be the noble Israel of God. Israel was not divourced, notwithstanding many backslidings and pollutions, while God afforded them true Prophets or preserved some saving doctrine in their Teachers. Christ walked in the midst of the Golden Candlesticks, though some of them them were ſo corrupt, Rev. 2. 3. Laodicea ſeems to intend the Popiſh Church ſpecially, though its apoſtacy be ſo great, and hath been maintained ſo long by a cruel and bloody faction, the man of ſin being head thereof: they have bread and water, though by weight and meaſure, Ezek. 5. 16, 17. Pray for the peace of Jeruſalem.

Subordinate

Subordinate Power may not offensively resist Supreme Power in an hostile way for its own defence, except the Laws of the place do so permit.

1. THere is no imitable President in Israel for such defensive resistance, though Israel oft and a long time groaned under sad and heavy oppressions. Jehoiada suppressed Athaliah usurping, but none are supposed to resist Kings or Judges legally invested with Power without special warrant from God, except in an unrighteous manner. The godly Prophets, and Priests, and Nobles would have redressed evils at sundry times (as it may be presumed) by such meanes, had it not been unlawfull. Josh. 1. 16. Exod. 18. 24.

2. David would not defend himself by force of armes against Saul without Gods command. He thought it behoved him to flee rather then to fight, till God bid him return into the Land of Judah. Gods bidding him to return into the land of Judah might cause him justly to conclude that it was his pleasure he should there defend himself as necessity required; and accordingly he thought it lawfull to hold Keilah by force against Saul; yet he never took advantages to cut Saul off, but counted it wickedness so to do, *Sam.*24.14. and 26.9,10,11. Bruits will turn head when they cannot flee, but good men will suffer rather then be rebellious, David was anointed, Saul was an implacable enemy, had murtherd the Lords Priests, waged war causelessly to the oppression of his Subjects, God had openly rejected him. Some told David that it was lawful to make war against Saul, and to kill him also upon all advantages, but David was not of this opinion. First, David chose to flee till God directed him another way. Secondly, Gods bidding him returne to Judah put him into some posture of defence by rational consequence, and yet David did shunne always of offending Saul. Thirdly, God might give David more expres command then is recorded. Fourthly, had it been lawful, why did not the good men in Israel stand up for David in his righteous cause, against Saul their King rejected by God, for their King David anointed by God? God extraordinarily stirred up some, but none are said to help David as deeming it lawful for the defence of David or themselves. Fifthly, if it were lawful for David to defend himself by the sword against Saul to the endangering of his life, it had also been warrantable for David to have laid hands on Saul upon the advantages given him so to do. If necessary defence gave David leave to hazard Sauls life in battel, why not to take away his life out of battel, at least to restraine him? Sauls death was necessary for Davids right, yea as he thought sometimes, for his life, for he saith, I shall one day perish by the hand of Saul. All this may shew that David durst not forcibly attempt any thing against Saul, further then God gave him special direction to act. Josephus observes that the revolt of the ten Tribes from Rehoboam, was the beginning of those miseries which brought them to their end.

not

Object. The Kings of Israel were anointed.

Answ. Their anointing was not any addition of their power. Other Kings may have the same degree of power, though not such confirmation, and they may be sufficiently confirmed by Gods Ordinance, though not so abundantly as the Kings of Israel. It is sin to resist power, though a greater sinne to resist power most eminently confirmed by God. Gradus non variant speciem. Priests though annointed might be called to account, and so might Kings also, if they had been subordinated to an higher power. Kings are now annointed with the reality, though not with the Ceremonie of regal power.

Object. Kings in Israel were set up by God immediately.

Answ. This was an eminent qualification of power in Israel, but this did not exempt Kings from correction, farther then the Law allowed it. God immediately called Aaron in some sort, and the Prophets', yet these were subordinate to higher powers. The nature of Kingly power, not the manner of conferring it, priviledged Kings in Israel from being subject to correction. The essence of things doth constitute and denominate them. The efficient is extrin-secal to being and operation. Besides succeding Kings in Israel had the same power with the first, though immediately called. Kingly power whether it be given mediately or immediately, is Gods Ordinance, and therefore they that resist it, resist Gods Ordinance.

Object. The Kings of Israel had more power then those of these dayes.

Answ. They inherited their power by Gods Ordinance, and therefore are imitable presidents. It is evident that such power was customary amongst other nations. But what power Kings have, must depend on the fundamental Laws of Kingdomes. Si errandum est, sine jure absolvere, quam per injuriam condemnare sanctius est.

Object. Amaziah was slaine by them in Jerusalem.

Answ. First, they at Jerusalem are brought in as doing it illegally. Secondly, they were very corrupt at this time. Thirdly, there is no mention of good men consenting. Fourthly, they conspired against law and reason, if David might not have made a party against Saul for the same end. They are said to conspire, and the phrase usually imports an illegal processe. Jehu may be said to conspire, 1 Kings 10. Though he had a Commission from God, because he blurred and stained his warrant with his politick designes and cruel intentions. He may as well be charged with conspiracy as with blood, Hos. 1. The history of the Scripture doth usually declare and not censure, both persons and actions. Fifthly, the godly Priests and Prophets are never observed to make such attempts and insurrections, but alwayes to be obedient, when their Kings were most outragious;

and

and yet Prophets had been like to prevail. Sixthly, Baaſha; and Shalum, and Zimri are cenſured no otherwiſe. Seventhly, all Iſrael concurred in the ſetting up of Amaziah his ſon, when as only the faction of Jeruſalem is ſaid to conſpire and ſlay him. Eighthly, the faction was ſo potent that ſlew his father, that they maintained it till Amaziah was confirmed in his Kingdom, 2 Chron. 25.3. 2 Kings 14. 5. And though the Hiſtory be ſilent, yet ſome might be puniſhed for conſpiring againſt Amaziah. Sometimes an amneſtia is moſt conducible to peace and ſafety. Ninthly, it was unlawful for any to make themſelves ſupream Judges, Exod. 2. 14. Luke 12. 14. Numb. 16. 28. Cuſtome is the beſt interpreter of Law. The Law of God is the beſt interpreter of right.

Thirdly, it is illegal to private perſons, becauſe they are ſubject, and therefore for publick perſons, if by the Law they are alſo ſubject. It is ſubjection, not privacy that binds the hands of private perſons. Folly ſhould not be exalted, nor ſervants ride while Princes go on the ground, Eccleſ. 10. 6, 7. It is one of the four things which the earth cannot bear, Prov. 30. Rex eſt, nocentem punit, cede juſtitiæ, innocentem, cede fortunæ. Sen.

Fourthly, Subjects are uſually ſworn abſolutely to ſupream power: for oaths not kept eſpecially the Land mournes, Ezek. 17. 16. Pſalm 15. 4. Zedekiah Ezek. 45.7,8,9 muſt keep his oath to a tyrant, Jer. 27. 12. and 29. Matth. 22.21. Eccleſ. 9.2. Exod. 20.12. and 21. 25. Rom. 13. 1. 1 Pet. 2. 13. Joſhua might have pretended much for breaking his Oath to the Gibeonites. Falſa juratio eſt exitioſa, omnis periculoſa, nulla ſecura. Aug.

Fifthly,

Fifthly, Primitive Christians were subject to most nefarious men, to Tyrants in action, while they were not such in respect of right and constitution. Prayers and tears were the weapons of Christians. Did they want multitude? Tertullian denies it. Did they want zeal? They could chuse to be Martyrs. It is greater zeal to die like Martyrs, then to fight like souldiers. We are apt to applaud the seditious for publick spirits. Self-love and love of novelty together with fair pretensions, especially religious ones, makes sedition honourable.

Exod. 21. 17, 15. and 22. 28.

Sixthly, children are forbid to revile parents, much more forcibly to resist them. It is more opposite to the publick good, to resist the father of our Country, then to offend our natural parents. Patria est charior parentibus, ergo pater patriæ; they are most unnatural that resist parents, most pernicious that resist Princes. The father of the republick, saith Cicero, deserves every ones love. We must revile none if they are not wicked, not parents whatsoever they be. Paul acknowledgeth that he ought not to revile the high-Priest upon any account. The Law doth not forbid us to revile Rulers with an exception, only when thoy do not deserve it. Publick reproof of a Prince, is a reproach in policy. To speak evil of dignities, is one Character of the filthy dreamers and apostates, foretold by Peter and Jude, Optabilius est in sapientem, quam in stolidum hostem incidere.

Seventhly, if it be lawful for one to right ones self for a great injury, then for a lesser and for any one, farther then there is a reserve in the Law; And if so, men would fall together by the eares for every bone. He loveth transgression that loveth strife, and he

he that exalteth his gate, seeketh destruction, Prov. 17. 19. It is safer to know our duty, then to enjoy liberty.

Eighthly, Paul, Peter, Jude, all command honour and obedience, where Christians were at the best, and Rulers at the worst. To honour and obey is ex diametro opposite to the seeking of destruction in an hostile way. To resist Magistrates, is not to obey them. To fight with men, is not to defend them. To resist a Prince, is in tanto to deny his authority, to deny his authority is to make him no King. Soveraignty makes Kings, & subjection Subjects. Relatives stand & fall together. Pleasure becomes not a fool, much lesse for servants to rule over Princes, Prov. 19. 10. It is lawful to resist the unlawful command, not the person nor his power. Active obedience is not alwayes due, but passive is then necessary. To resist the person is to resist the whole authority, becaufe the person is the Subject of authority in whole.

Rom. 13.1. 1 Pet.2.13. Esay 49.23. Rev.17.16,17. Exod.22.28. Prov.16.10,14 and 19.12. and 20.2. and 24. 21. and 30.31. 1 Tim.2.1,2. Job 34. 18. Ezra 6. 10. 1 Sam. 10. 27. Eccles.8.3,4 and 10. 20. Tit.3.1.

Object. The Apostles speak of Magistrates in the abstract.

Answ. The Apostles speak of Magistrates in the concrete. He beareth not the sword in vain; he is the Minister of God, &c. Rom. 13. 3,4. Other places are parallel. Peter expresseth the King in the concrete, 1 *Pet.*2.13,14.

Object. The Apostles speak onely of good Magistrates.

Answ. They shew what the Ordinance tends to, and makes that an argument of obedience to Magistrates though not good. We must reverence one in office for the office-sake. It is certaine the Apostles instructed Christians how to behave themselves selves to their present Magistrates, though de facto, they were a terrour to the good Christians. The practice of primitive Christians shews that they understood the Apostles of all lawful Magistrates whether they were bad men, or bad Magistrates. Peter mentioneth Kings such as they were at that time. Paul makes the end of Magistracy a reason, not a condition of obedience They urge obedience to all without exception, therefore we owe obedience without exception. Our Saviour obeyed, and paid tribute to the present Magistrates, because he was not free from obedience apparently, though really he was the Lord of lords. Else we should obey bad Magistrates onely for necessity sake; but the Apostle saith, for conscience, for the Office, for Order sake, for the Ordinance sake. So the Jews obeyed the Babylonians, namely for their Oath sake, at least it was their duty so to do. Christians were exhorted to obey the same, which they ought to pray for, and to pay dues to. Good men must obey evil Magistrates that bad men may obey good Magistrates.

Ninthly, passive obedience is due as well as active, 1 Pet. 4. 13,14. Servants, Wives, Children must obey froward Masters, Husbands, Parents. The Apostles might have gathered great armies with their gifts. Sergius Paulus, the Steward of Corinth, such great men, together with the Apostles might have set up the standard for truth, and for their brethren. But the Apostle requires our suffering even unto death for well-doing. It were flattery, and hypocrisy, to pretend obedience, and intend it no longer then must needs. We are bid to honour the King, and fear God in sincerity.

Tenthly,

Tenthly, Subjects do commit themselves to the discretion and faithfulnesse of supream power, further then they reserve for themselves. Children by nature, Subjects by reason are subordinated to authority. Oeconomick power is the sampler of politick; Men must stand to arbitration or compromise, when they bind themselves to it. Subjection includes passive obedience, if absolute, and passive obedience precludes destructive resistance. Nullum aliud quam parendi & patiendi datum est mandatum. Calv. Instit. lib. 4. cap. 20. Sect. 31.

Eleventhly, Supream power was ordained by God to determine strife. All Judges are to determine, two witnesses are to determine, an oath is to determine and end strife, Exod. 24. 22. The fifth Commandment is the Castle of both Tables, Magistracy is the keeper of both Tables. They that make Laws and give Oaths must interpret them, Seditions, violences, rapines, murthers, paricides must needs be multiplied, if men may judge their Judges. Se judice nemo reus; Such as are under authority may complaine: co-ordinate authority may resist, superiour authority may punish. It is better, saith Bodin, magnanimously to die, then to oppose a Soveraign in an hostile way. Jesuites, Mariana and such like, may wish there were many Clementes, Castelli, Ravillaci, as if there were not devils enough.

Twelfthly, the godly were either actively or passively obedient to Saul, David, Solomon, Ahaz, &c. notwithstanding idolatry, murther, and many crimes did urge the contrary.

Object. A people may change their Government at pleasure.

Answ. By the decease of the present possessors, or or by their consent, or by lawful conquest, or by delinquency, where it is so provided. Yet a plant often translated hardly thrives if it lives. The Text alledged doth not prove a power in Israel to change at pleasure. They sinned in rejecting Samuel and David, for Saul and Absolom. They were men of Belial that despised Saul after his Election, 1 Sam. 10. 27. They rebelled against Rehoboam that adhered to Jeroboam, 1 Kings 12. 19. 2 Chron. 10. 19. and 13. 5. I hope a Covenant conferring power on Kings is as firme as a common Deed of gift. Gods indignation against Korah was great, because he opposed lawful authority, Numb. 16.

1 Sam. 8. 6.
1 Kings 12. 19.
2 Chron. 10. 19 and 13. 5, 6.

Object. Defensive power is natural.

Answ. Adams children might not have defended themselves by hostility against their Father and Soveraign; nor the younger brethren against the first-borne, Gen. 4. 7. Exod. 21. 15, 17. and 22. 28.

Though defensive power be natural amongst equals, yet they may give up their power for order sake, as well as their freedome in coming under any authoritie. In the natural body the inferior members cannot defend themselves without the head; much lesse against it: Heels cannot reach the head. Christians are bid pray for their tyranical Lords, and yet one may pray for the death of him whom he ought not put to death by resistance. They that have unlimited power to elect a King, may make cautions, conditions, and reserves in their contract, or they may invest him with absolute power. Men may retract their opinions, but not their covenants. Against a King upon his Throne many wise Nations have allowed no rising up, 2 Chron. 13. 5, 6, 7. Israel by Gods Ordinance all

Ezra 6. 10.
1 Tim. 2. 1, 2.

all along subjected themselves to higher powers, therefore it was both lawful and needful so to do. Men may give away and sell away that which they hold by natural right of inheritance.

Object. Covenant must give place to rights of nature.

Answ. When rights of nature are transmitted by Covenants, they must keep their place, else all that swear fidelity do sin, either in swearing that which is unlawful, or equivocally and falsely. Nay, else it is unlawful to sell ones inheritance, to marry to a man, to serve another in a way of a free choice. Else away with Magistrates, and down with Masters. If this be a natural principle, all Government is unnatural which ariseth by combination. But why then must Zedekiah keep his oath with the King of Babylon? What shall we make of all the admonitions concerning servants and subjects in the Scriptures? Melius est non promittere quam non præstare promissa. Schoolmen say the natural right is twofold, præceptive & concessive, and that Covenants do concessively belong to natural right. And it is clear enough that Covenant-keeping doth belong to natural right preceptively, even when the Covenant-making in particular is against the natural Law. We must keep Covenants according to the Law of nature, though we dampnifie our selves in making of them, Psalm 15. Cato would have delivered Cæsar to the Germans for breaking league with them. Regulus kept his Oath with the Carthaginians, though it cost him his life. Jaddus the high Priest is commended for denying to swear fealty to Alexander a Conquerour, while Darius his rightful Lord lived. Oaths are made to God as well as men, and therefore transcend Covenants, and belong to Divine right. Juramentum est stricti juris & interpretationis, Covenants be nullified by fear, force, fraud, but not Oathes because they oblige to God.

Object. The Princes of Germany have deposed Emperours.

Answ. Sometimes with a vengeance as well as with a witness. Jodaius being Emperour made it lawful in case he observed not the imperial constitutions. It is said that the Subjects swear fidelity to the Empire, not to the Emperour, it being an Aristocracy, not an absolute Monarchy. The united Provinces of Belgia (according to Grimston) had liberty from their constituted Laws to resist Philip; Trajan bid the Romane Pretor use the sword against him as the cause required. And some think the Majesty was not in the Emperour. But if some have opposed and deposed Princes de facto, it doth not follow that all may do it de jure.

Object. what if Kings transgress bounds?

Answ. It is lawful to ward blows, when not to give them: Children may have cause to bind parents never to beat them.

Object. A servant may defend himself against his Master.

Answ. Masters are generally subordinate themselves to higher authority; nor have they ordinarily power of life and death; so farre as Masters have power, servants ought to suffer. All should be obedient to the power, though not alwayes to the precept of Superiors.

Object. Kings swear to the people.

Answ. God swears to us, yet is not subject to us.

A promissory Oath binds but to the matter promis'd, and they do not swear to be subject to punishment, deposition, &c. An Oath doth bind simply as to the subject matter as a Covenant, and a Master doth not make himself subject to his servant for correction, nor an husband to his wife by covenanting, nor Soveraigns to their subjects, though they covenant and swear to observe Laws. Some Kings in Israel entred into Covenant without diminution of their Soveraignty. Kings may swear only to bind their consciences to the direction, not the correction of Laws. A witnesse in Court may swear to no Covenant, but only to an affirmation. Hereditary Kings are essentially invested with power before their Coronation. The King never dies. The Law is expres, that the next by birth shall raigne, and be acquitted of all crimes whatsoever. Kings that have power to call and dissolve Parliaments, and to render all Acts void that have not royal consent, cannot be subject to correction, if they will not correct themselves. A King is the Primum mobile of all coercive power. Sworn brethren have no coercive power over each other, though their consciences are mutually obliged. Supremacy and impunity are noble Twins. In a Democracy the major part is unaccountable, in an Aristocracy the optimates, as to men. If we swear absolute fidelity to the King, then the Kings Oath doth not render him capable of correction by us, but at his own pleasure; Else our Oath and his would be contradictory to each other.

Object. We swear conditionally.

Answ. There is no condition intimated in re jurata, and and there is none intended by him that gives the Oath. Jurare lingua, mente injurata, non licet. We ought to take an Oath with the same intention that it is given. Equivocation in an Oath, is a profanation of Gods Name. Ne violes religionem juramenti. The Lacedemonians having sworne to overcome the Messenii before they returned home, though beguiled, chose rather to endanger the losse of the City, and off-spring, then to violate their Oath.

Perjuro semel, nunquam habenda est fides, Cic. Tus.

Object. Power is still suppletive in the collective body, cumulative non privative, derived from the community.

Answ. This distinction seems altogether fictitious and factious. The Oath of Allegiance and Supremacy, the constitution of Parliaments must suffer a privation to generate such a distinction. When Subjects swear fidelity to the King, and not the Kingdome, where is the Majesty? Samuel shews what was the power of Kings in Israel, 1 Sam. 8. He doth what he please, Eccles. 8. 3, 4. He is to be charmed not violenced, Eccles. 10. 1, 8. He is not to be cursed in our thoughts, lest God discover it, ver. 17. He digs a pit and falls into it himself, that opposeth the King, 5, 6, 7, 8. See Pemble.

Object. Samuel intimates that Kingly power is a nimiety.

Answ. Samuel shews that it would seem a nimiety upon tryal. God did not count Kingly power too much absolutely, because he allowed it, and blessed it in Israel. Kings are not wont immoderately to use power. And Israel desired a King by reason of unbelief profanely, unseasonably, and injuriously, slighting Theocracy, not consulting God, or regarding Samuel

Israel slighted the Theocracy profanely, asked a King unseasonably, not consulting God, injuriously rejecting Samuel.

muel. Moses had a Kingly power, Deut. 33.5. And the Judges had a Kingly power, Judg. 17.6. and 19. 2. and 21.25. God had promised to give Israel Kings, Gen. 17.6. It was Esau his preferment to have Kings before Jacob, Gen. 36.31. The Judges might have Kingly power, though not the title and state of Kings. Samuel shews the Kingly state would be more inconvenient in sinful mens hands then they would foresee, but not that it would be more grievous then other formes of policy. The Sun is sometimes too hot for us, and breeds many sorts of vermine, yet it is most eminently necessary. If supream power be in one, he cannot do much hurt unless the greater part joyn with him, and the same mischief is more frequently incident to a Democracy. One is more easily perswaded then a multitude. The greater part is commonly the worser. The body of the people is a soure stock, seldome or never yeelding any good fruit, except a Monarchy or Aristocracy be ingrafted upon it. Aristocracy is more subject to sedition, and often breaks into a Monarchy. One Monarch doth most resemble Gods Soveraignty, and the Kingdom of Christ: and is most conformable to fatherly or family power, and to the Supremacy of the head in the natural body. One head best likes and becomes one. Many heads have many mouths to bite and devoure. Multitudo Senatorum est inepta secretis. Kingly State doth most secure State secrets, terrifie enemies, daunt the ambitious, strengthen authority, beautifie Laws, sweeten Justice, exalt the people, raising higher by the head then other politick bodies. Therefore God promised a King ad honorem, Exod. 19. 6. God never approved proved of a Democracy in the Church or State of Israel. The vulgar are carried by affection, consulting negligently, difficultly, tumultuously, openly, or nothing at all. Openings are weaknings to the incommunicable affairs of State. Great bodies are so slow, that dangers do frequently prevent their motions. God preserves goodness in some particulars and not in the general. God preserved a good line from Adam in a few only. The streame of affections meeting like many rivers in one channel, renders a multitude uncontrolable and implacable. All are not born, and framed to rule. Amongst the bruit creatures, some have an instinct to lead, others to follow. Dos sua cuique. In a multitude there will be too many new Lords and new Laws. Novus rex, nova lex. In the natural body the head is accommodated only with understanding, and the senses of seeing and hearing, &c. The inferiour parts are capable of feeling, and naturally destinated to be passive in way of correction, rather then active in governing. It is easie for a popular Orator to suit the dispositions and inclinations of an heady multitude, and to stir their passions to his own purposes, as a winde raiseth the seas, and causeth them to rage and foame. A Councel of all sorts is a juvenatus (as one saith) not a senatus. Weak intellectuals are soon made drunk with honours. One bad master is better then many. Turba argumentum falsi est, populo non placet cui vitia displicent. Great men in Rome and Athens were wont to foster war, that they might not be trodden under feet by the people. It is good to adventure all under one Master, if in one vessel. God ordained one great light to rule the day. Councel united like light in one body, doth dispell, dissipate, comcompoſe or alay the clouds, and ſtormes of faction moſt effectually. Iſrael never flouriſhed more then under Kings. Magiſtrates, annually elected want root and ſhadow like young trees, there is need of ſeparation, and unction and duration in a Magiſtrate. Learners in muſick break the harpe before they can uſe it. In elective Kingdomes wiſdome makes choiſe of one line to prevent deſolations. It is not ſafe to graft often upon the ſame ſtock. Magiſtrates had need be encouraged as well as qualified They have to do both with the worſt of men and things. Magiſtracy is divine, though a Magiſtrate be an humane creature. Liberty as now it is, is an accident and effect of ſin. All were naturally ſubject to fatherly power in Adam, diſtinct republicks are fundamentally for many ſects and factions. Freedome to ſinne hath uſhered in freedom from authority. Per ordinem omnia, Bias, being minded to put their City into a democraticall forme, anſwered, Go and put thy family firſt into the like. A family is an image of a City, a City is a greater family. In an ariſtocracy the fewer the firmer. The weight of a reaſon is better then number of votes, God raiſed Kings ſo high in Iſrael, that their arbitrary power was viva lex.

Novi Oratores & stulti adolescentuli evertunt Rempublicam. Cic.

Prov. 19. 13, & 28. 2. Ec. 10. 7. Ioſh. 1, 16. Num. 27. 15. 16, Deut. 17. 20, 21.

Object. Salus populi eſt ſuprema lex.

Anſw. This rule holds in making, executing ratifying and abrogating of Laws, But it helps not againſt law and obligations of obedience. The generall good ſhould not be a particular mans injury, any mans injury, or every mans law. Neither is it for the generall good to nullify law and obligations religious or civill. The good of the Church is immediately the generall end of government, and yet the minor may not be destructive to the major, or the major to the minor part against order, for such an end. Children though the greater part of a family, may not murther their father for their own safety, grace doth not destroy nature. Nor reason nor Nature allowes defence against the greatest injury in a disorderly way: Gods will is a greater law then the peoples weale. What is illegall is unlawfull, because promises though hurtfull to our selves are obligatory in Gods word. Isa. 51. It is not lawfull because it is plausible, to say that an army may turn their Cannon mouths against a generall seeking their ruin, in case they are bound to him without condition.

Fieri non debuit, factum valet.

Zech 8.17.18.

Torquatus caused his son to ride in tryumph for a victory, and yet condemned him to death for atchieving it disorderly.

Object. Are children born to obedience?

Children in Mastrickt are subject to the same power with the mother to the Bishop or the Duke of Brabant.

Answ. Children may be bound and sold by parents Gideon had the profer of a Kingdom for his children after him, therefore they that made the profer would have bound their own children to obedience together with themselves. Alborn in an hereditary Kingdome are subject to it's laws, yea strangers while they are in it's territories. Else children may combine into a new republick at their pleasure.

The children of slaves are borne slaves Children are under the like obligations, while they enjoy like priviledges with their parents. Parents do covenant with God for their children, Gen. 17. 7. Deut. 29. 14. The law of nature gives parents power to bind children to penalty, to forfeiture of leases, to payment of rents. Deut. 29. 10. Numb. 30. 6.

Ob-

Object. God promiseth to raise up and restore Judges as at the first, Es. 1.

Answ. Not in opposition to Kings, for elsewhere God promiseth David for King, the off-spring of David in regall state, Hos. 1. and provides for the Prince, Ezek. 45. 7. Though these texts be understood mistically, yet they prove Kingly power to be a great gift of God.

And the text alledged in the objection, so farre as it is litterally interpreted may intend only good Judges in conjunction with a King. And the same prophet doth litterally promise the protection of Kings Es. 49. 23. The text was never litterally ful-filled of Judges in opposition to Kings.

Object. Acordinat power may defend it self.

Answ. But are they coordinate that have sworn the Kings supremacy? Are they coordinate that have absolutely sworn to defend the King his person, crown and dignity with the loss of their own Lives that can act nothing in Parliament but at the Kings pleasure? The King hath been counted the Principium caput, & finis Parliamenti. Laws are like seabanks imoveable without the same power that made them covenants and oathes are the heart strings of all society and order. The oath expressely excludes all equivocations and mentall reservations. A condition not declared in the oath, is a meer mentall reservation, and expressly cautioned. What breach of oath, or doth every breach disoblige subject from obedience to their King? Higher powers are so called because they are higher in force as well as in fotme. Rom. 13.

Object. A murtherer must dye by some or other, whosoever he be.

Answ. First Impunity is granted to the Major part in a democracy. Secondly, All Laws do make it murther for a private man to kill a murtherer. Thirdly, David saith none could lay hands on Saul, though a murtherer, and be innocent. Fourthly. Why did not the Prophets and Priests move to bring murtherous Kings to condigne punishment? The silence of Scripture in this respect doth probably give consent. Fifthly, Gods law is, that the Judges shall determine and Judge between strok and stroke. Sixthly, Christ counted it capitall for private persons to use the sword in defence of himself against murther. Mat. 27. 52. Seventhly The Apostles exhort Christians to obey such as were murtherers. Eightly, Israel is commanded to obey and pray for Nebucadnezar a grand murtherer. Ninthly, It is not lawfull for private men to execute vengeance. It is Gods prerogative either immediatly or in way of an ordinance to avenge himselfe. Rom. 12. Christ would not Judge, because not made a Judge. The King of Kings doth punish Kings. Paris in parem non est potestas.

Covenant-breaking is heatheniſme. Rom. 1. 28. 30. To make might right, is to make men beasts. Lex lupi, est robur corporis. Rex non est magni nominis umbra: Nemo prudens sumit pœnas quia peccatum est sed ne peccetur. Pœna non irascitur sed cavet. It is usurpation of liberty in subjects to deny obedience, of Soveraignty to exercise authority against their Soveraign, thieves and robbers may have sharper swords then honest men. Fiat justitia, ruat cœlum. The sword is not a master but a servant to justice. It is unnecessary to sinne, when it may be avoided by death. It is better to be patients in cruell persecutions, then agents in bloody reformation.

reformations. Let it not be ſaid the King of Spain is a King of men, the King of France is a King of aſſes, the King of England is a King of devills. The ancient cuſtome of ending controverſies by fighting it out, was wont to put an end to the perſons as well as the caſe, Homines non amant reum ſed rem. Auguſt. Amo proditionem, proditores non approbo, Phil. Mac. Let not juſtitia be converted into viſtitia. Heſiod calls ſome χειροδίκαι. Brennu preſſit Cluſium jure naturali, ut reſpondebat, quo is qui minus fortis eſt potentiori cedere jubetur. Plrt. in camil nulla turpis vincendi ratio, apud ethincum Amicitiam utilitate non fide colebat was no good friendſhip. Rules are difficult, and certain examples eaſy and dangerous. Si jus violandum eſt, tum regnandi cauſa, in cæteris pietatem colas is no good maxime. Tempus eſt ſapientiſſimum Thales. One put's downe a Queſtion and Anſwears in manner following.

Lyſander adminiſtred juſtice in pelle vulpina

Pyrrhus his longeſt ſword might mangle juſtice, not meaſure it.

Qu. Dic mihi quid, quæſo, toto jam regnat in orbe.
R. Jus vel tranſpoſitis (vis) male litterulis.

It is unlawful for born or ſworn ſubjects to engage to uſurpers while the right heir lives and doth not give up his right, firſt engaging to uſurpers to help them, or not to help the right heir doth preclude & exclude that due obedience which may be called for Secondly Uſurpation doth not diſoblige ſubjects, becauſe it cannot deprive the heir of his right. Robbery doth not take away an honeſt mans right, though his goods. Thirdly, Jehojada and Judah were bound in conſcience to pull down Athalajah, after that ſhe had conquered and poſſeſſed the government ſeaven yeares. Therefore they could not have engaged to her with a good con-conscience 2 Chron. 23.3. Fourthly Jaddus and the Jews refused to swear fidelity unto Alexander while Darius lived. Six thousand Pharisees (as the Historian reports) refused to swear to Herod and Cæsar. Fifthly, The renunciation of a Prince by the Major part of people, doth not disoblige, if it be injustice to renounce him. An unjust renunciation cannot justly disoblige. We do not swear fidelity so long only as the Major part see cause: subjects may rebell aswell as forreiners invade. Sixthly, When a Prince is in an incapacity to govern, his right remaines. God can comfort desolations. God can change hearts and weaken hands. David was in some degree of incapacity, when he fled before Absolom. Azariah was in no capacity actual, while Athaliah had full possession. God doth try the faithfulnesse of his people by overturning providences. Hushai, Ittai, Ahimaaz, and such like must have occasions to shew their fidelity. Judah did yeild to Nebucadnezer, but they were directed by the prophet Jeremiah, and the other Prophets: howsoever example is not equivalent to rule. Seventhly, A meer conquest is a meere roberry. A pirate rightly told Alexander that he was a great thiefe. Eighthly, It is lawfull for a captive to flee if taken by such as wage war unjustly, Azor. Ninthly, A just war and conquest may require the acceptance of satisfaction without subjection of the conquered. Tenthly, an absolute and just conquest supposeth the captivating and deposing of the Prince, or power, and that in way of justice, or else it cannot disoblige the subjects. A just deposing of a Prince only renders him civilly dead. Eleventhly, Subjects cannot justly conquer and depose their absolute Prince. An absolute

Prince

Prince may ſuffer wrong from, but not do wrong to his ſubjects.

The reverence I owe to higher powers, and many ſad paſſages of providence, have moved me to look into this Queſtion, ſeaſonable though difficult and dangerous. When error is on horſe-back it is neither eaſy nor ſafe to undertak it: liberty is too oft pretended only to paliate licentiouſneſs, and neighbouring vice is too oft taken for virtue, as the evill ſpirit for Samlel his ghoſt. It is common to uſurpe authority under pretence of liberty, and for Tyrants to be moſt adverſe to Tyrants. Civill and ſacred power did conſiſt well in the ſame ſubject, and ſurely they are moſt ſubject to violence, when at greateſt diſtance from one another. Moſes and Aron have cauſe to embrace each other and Iſrael both of them together. In a policy conſtituted conformity is requiſite, but in conſtituting a Republick, I ſhould think it wiſdome to obſerve the divine paterne. The ſea hath more need of bounds and banks then a rivulet, It is moſt formidable to ſee a whole Countrey, or City on fire, doubtleſs magiſtracy is very ſacred, controuling churchmen and Church power, tending to the ſame end, though not by the ſame meanes. It is matter of lamentation to ſee a conjuncture of proteſtants and Jeſuites in principles, to the committing of ſuch ſacriledge upon perſons in higheſt place. Bonus eſt qui facit injuriam? noli credere, malus eſt? noli mirari, beſtia eſt? noli imitari. Dionyſius having robbed the Temple, and enjoying a proſperous wind, ſaid ſacriledge was no offence. The apoſtle doth not unadviſeadly conjoyn fear of God, and honour to the King. Pet. 2. 17. A King is Gods ſoveraign im age, My Son fear God and the King, and med- meddle not with them that art given to change. For their destruction shall arise suddainly, and who knoweth the ruin of them both. Prov. 24.21, 22. Whosoever is an usurper and tyrant I may say of him as Pausanias of a Physitian. He being asked whether he had tryed such a one; answered. Si periculum feciſſem, non viverem.

FINIS.

DA66
N95M1

DA66
N95M1